SUNDAY CONCERT TO AIDCHAMBER PLANS FOR NEEDY

The Chamber of Commerce has planned to try to relieve some of the acute need in the county among the very poor by collecting used clothing, staple groceries, canned goods, farm products, fruit and candy in time for distribution on Christmas Day. Reports have come to the organization of greater want than ever before and the Chamber is looking to the county citizens for cooperation.

The Washington College Glee Club and Orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Fred Livingood, have offered to stage a benefit concert on Sunday, November 14 at William Smith Hall for which tickets will be sold; the entire proceeds will go to the cause. Tickets will be on sale in all parts of the county.

District leaders are being appointed throughout Kent to act as centers for contribution of clothing and food. The leaders will furnish the Chamber with lists of those most in need in their neighborhoods and will make selections from articles brought to them and to the Chestertown center at the Chamber of Commerce. In this way the families will receive what is best suited to their needs and there will be no waste nor unsuitable gifts.

Unfortunately there are some children in Kent who have never known the joy of receiving Christmas gifts. The Chamber feels that aside from furnishing some of the practical things it should see that these little people have that pleasure which is the birthright of every child in a Christian community; and it is hoped that any of these who have been deprived of the fun of Christmas may be found and remembered through the generosity of Kent's citizens.

A full list of district leaders will be given next week. Those who have already accepted the post are Mrs. Evelyn Harris, Betterton; Mrs. Harry T. Williams, Worton; Mrs. J. A. Bigelow, Rock Hall; Contributions of all sorts will be received from now on at the office of the Chamber of Commerce on Court Street, Chestertown.

As an example of some of the striking want in Kent there is one family of seven who occupy a double bed with mere strips of blanket for warmth. This family lives on a tiny pittance and can hardly replenish household goods of any sort. Bedding of all sorts, in good condition, will be most gratefully received at the Chamber as there are undoubtedly other cases who are in need of warm covering for night.

LECTURE ON DEL-MAR-VA IN ENGLAND

The first request for information and illustrations regarding the Del-Mar-Va Peninsula to be used in a series of illustrated lectures in a foreign university has been received by the Del-Mar-Va Eastern Shore Association. It is from Professor A. E. Wilson, Master in Science and Fellow in the Royal Geopraphic Society, at Royds Hall, Huddersfield, England, and the material desired is to be presented at the Technical College of Leeds University.

Professor Wilson in writing the Association states it has been referred to him as the authentic source from which to secure the data he desires. He asks for information dealing with all activities of the area including the industries and trade; growth and development and facilities and growth of th outstanding communities. Illustrations are requested for the purpose of being used in lantern slides and apparently the plan is to present a very thorough series of lectures regarding Del-Mar-Va and several of the points immediately adjacent.

The Association has compiled and forwarded to Professor Wilson a complete set of literature as issued by them including individual community booklets and illustrations.

One of the outstanding educational authorities on the Peninsula who is familiar with the rating of Leeds University and the high standing of Professor Wilson, states that this request is impressive evidence of the far peaching value which Del-Mar-Va publicity has attained. It is said at Association headquarters that it is unquestionably one of the rare occasions where a particular section or State in this country has received recognition to an equal extent in a foreign University of the standing of Leeds and that Association officials believe it to be an achievement giving unquestionable evidence of the wide spread attention directed to Del-Mar-Va as the result of the Association's endeavors.
