PUBLIC ENLIGHTENED AND AROUSED

The following editorial appeared in the Wilmington Every Evening this week:

The value of advertising—particularly through the newspapers—was demonstrated last week in convincing fashion. It was thrift week, and for seven days a great deal of information was given the public as a guide for the people toward better living and the best means of providing for the future. Concrete results were reflected in the business world, locally and generally, in a most substantial way, and immediately, according to information obtained from financial institutions and other enterprises directly concerned in this campaign of education.

Wednesday, for example, was life insurance day. That day was devoted to an intensive effort to have the people understand and appreciate the need of looking to the future. As a result of this one-day campaign 612 Wilmingtonians increased their estates through various forms of life insurance to the extent of $1,078,858.

What happened during the intensive drive last week proves that there are many potential business opportunities that can be reached only through advertising. And the best way to get the message to all the people is through the newspapers.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the membership of the Kent County Chamber of Commerce for election of officers will be held on Friday, February 6, 1931, at the Court House at 8 p. m.

At this meeting the annual report of the president and treasurer will be made.

A large attendance at this meeting is requested.

GOV. COMMENTS ON BRIDGE REPORT

"Of the three alternatives which appear to us, the first is that the Legislature could adopt the recommendation of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge Commission and create a new State department to be known as the Maryland Bridge Commission, which would be equipped with competent engineering facilities and would be charged with the duty of developing a State-wide program for the building of important toll bridges or tunnels across the Chesapeake Bay, the Potomac river and any other waterways of the State which the commission thought justified such undertakings.

Cost Division Given

"When this commission decided to build a bridge, then the cost would be met from the proceeds of bonds issued not by the State but by the commission. The interest and principal on these bonds would be paid from the gross tolls received from the operation of the bridge and the maintenance and operating expenses would be paid by the State Roads Commission from the gasoline taxes. If the Legislature adopts this plan, then the new State Department would proceed to acquire the engineering, traffic and financial data and estimates necessary to enable it to decide whether a bridge should be built across the Chesapeake Bay under this plan.

"The second alternative is that the Legislature could confine itself to considering the one question whether the State would provide, at whatever may be the best location, a bridge across the Chesapeake Bay. Should the Legislature decide this in the affirmative, then it would have to determine whether the cost should be paid by the issue of State bonds, which would be carried in the general tax levy, or whether the cost should be paid from the tolls and revenues to be received from the operation of the bridge.

"The third alternative is that the Legislature could decide that the State should not at this time create the Maryland Bridge Commission and should not provide for building a bridge across the Chesapeake Bay, either, but that it should leave the building of a bridge across the Bay to private capital and enterprise."

HEALTH NOTES.

CONTROL AND PREVENTION OF COLDS

"The quickest way to get rid of a cold, is to go to bed and stay there until the attack is over and your doctor says you may go out again," was the way Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, answered the question "What shall I do when I feel a cold coming on?"

"Send for your doctor at the beginning of the attack," he continued. "Don't wait until you are down and out with it. You will save time in the end, by taking no chances with a cold. You will also help to prevent the after-effects which so often follow neglected colds—pneumonia, among them, with the possibility of a damaged heart, and even tuberculosis.

"Colds, influenza, grippe, or whatever we may happen to call these diseases, are believed to be spread from person to person through the discharges of the nose and throat. To protect yourself from such diseases.

"1. Keep away from people who are sneezing, coughing or sniffling, or who are actively ill with colds or pneumonia.

"2. Keep away from crowded places when colds are generally prevalent. This is especially important in regard to children.

"Have your own towel and drinking cup and always wash your hands before eating.

"4. Avoid overheated rooms. See that you have fresh air in the room in which you work as well in your sleeping room.

"5. You can protect yourself from colds as you can from other illness by keeping yourself physically fit-by eating simple nourishing food; by drinking plenty of water; by some exercise out of doors every day; by dressing according to the weather; by having plenty of sleep in a well-ventilated room, and by keeping the bowels regulated.

"If you have a cold, keep your germs to yourself. To protect others,

"1. Hold your handkerchief over your mouth and nose when you cough or sneeze. It is a good thing to use paper handkerchiefs or cheescloth when you have a cold and burn or otherwise dispose of them after use, so that other people will not be endangered.

"2. Keep away from the people who are well, so that your friends will not be needlessly exposed to your germs.

Ask your doctor about Rexall Milk of Magnesia. He knows that this pleasant antacid and laxative meets the highest standards of purity and strength. Sold only at Rexall Drug Stores.
