PENINSULA NEWS

Legislative action is being sought by a committee of Cambridge bankers to further the construction of a $75,000 bridge across the Choptank river.

A 200-foot strip of shoreline disappeared into the Atlantic ocean last night as high seas beat upon the beach here of Maryland's only ocean resort city. Thousands of tons of sand were carried back into the sea and a new highwaater mark was set for a distance of 100 yards.

While the encroachment of the sea was at its peak belief was expressed a new natural inlet might be cut through the narrow strip of sand into Sinepuxent Bay.

A large sand dune, however, stopped the invasion after a section of the beach had been washed away. The property damage was slight.

February 4, 1920, a similar storm cut through the beach three miles below Ocean City, leaving a natural inlet, which was in existence seven years before it was closed by sand.

Five of the eighteen proprietors of stores, restaurants and pool rooms in various parts of Cecil county, at whose places of business Sheriff Albert G. Buckworth and his deputies confiscated more than a hundred money vending slot machines, in a series of raids conducted last week, were fined twenty five dollars and costs when arraigned before Police Magistrate Gove S. Scotten, Elkton, Monday. The remainder had their cases postponed when they pleaded not guilty to the charge of keeping a gambling machine.

An allotment of $25,000 for the operation and care of the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal has been approved by the Secretary of War, according to a recent dispatch from Washington, D. C. The major part of this sum, it is understood, will be spent for maintenance.

That a new concrete bridge will be constructed over the Bohemia River during the State Roads Commission's 1931 program was made known recently in a letter from G. Clinton Uhl, chairman of the commission, to Cecil county's representatives at the Maryland House of Delegates. This long sought action comes as a result of a letter to the chairman from Messrs. Fred H. Leffler, Thomas Reynolds and William Briscoe.

The present span, an old and dilipated affair, has long been a source of contention and many appeals have previously been made to the State Roads Commission for a new structure at this point. The bridge is a vital part of the principal highway down the Eastern Shore, connecting the peninsula with Baltimore.

The lowest tide in a generation off Claiborne caused the ferry boat "Dennis" to ground on the trip from Annapolis to Claiborne Saturday night. It happened just as the boat turned the becan light near the pier. Passengers were taken off after the wind had sub sided the next morning.

An eighteen hole golf course will be laid out on the land bordering on the Avon River in Talbot county near Easton. In addition to Messrs. Spring and Hopkins, Mr. Milton Campbell, Mr. David Gregg, and Mr. C. P. Beck, as well as a number of other prominent resident of the County, are interested in this project. Some of these are now in the South and are arranging to secure the services and help of a Nationally known Golf Architect to plan the course. In the meantime the seeding of the Fairways for the first nine holes has already begun. It is planned to build the first nine holes this year, put them in play next year, at which time the construction of the second nine will be started and carried to completion in the following or third year.

Dick Porter, Allen citizen and former Wicomico High athlete, on Monday signed his 1931 contract with the Cleveland "Indians," evidently satisfied with what the club officials said was a substantial increase over his last year's salary.

A power water system of sprinkling the greens will be installed and a greens architect will rebuild each green on the Salisbury golf course.

When PAIN Comes

WHAT many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which quickly neutralizes acids. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali neutralizes instantly many times as much harmful acid, and then the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go get a small bottle to try.

Get the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia, the kind physicians have prescribed for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drugstore.

Jogalong Tales

CHAPTER 5

By this time they had walked some distance. Again the boy put his trumpet to his ear, this time hearing what seemed to him to be the sounds of distant jingling bells.

"Surely it isn't Christmas time," said he. "I hear a great many bells jingling, Mr. Jogalong, do you? I think they're sleigh bells."

"Certainly not sleigh bells, Boy. They are nothing more nor less than the Spring Peepers giving their usual twilight concert. We're getting very near to their concert hall. The voices are louder now."

The ground underneath the feet of the Jogalong and the boy was swampy and they had to be very careful in stepping to find some that was firm.

They reached the edge of what seemed to be a very large pond. It seemed to be very large, but perhaps that was because the boy and the Jogalong had grown so small.

"Do you see anything?" asked the Jogalong in a whisper.

"No," replied the boy, "not a thing."

The Jogalong had carefully stepped close to the edge of the pond and hidden himself under a tall sweet-flag. The boy did likewise.

"Now look straight out there," said he to the boy. "Do you see anything?"

"Only a small frog sitting on a floating twig," the boy said.

This was too much for the Jogalong. He rolled over on the bank and laughed. Immediately the concert stopped. When the Jogalong could again stop laughing and find his voice, he said between chuckles, "Why that's the Spring Peeper, Boy."

"That little thing!" exclaimed the boy. "Why I expected to see a great, huge creature. How can he make so much noise?"

"Sh-h-h-h, he's about to show you," replied the Jogalong. "I laughed and disturbed the concert for a time, but there, it's about to begin again. Watch that frog on the floating twig! There are many, many more just like him hidden around this pond and when he starts singing, the rest will join him. You'll be able to see how they do it."

The small frog on the floating twig was scarcely an inch long and suddenly, on the under part of his throat, appeared a huge white bubble half as large as his head and body together. His mouth he kept tightly closed, but as soon as the bubble appeared, the boy heard again that high, sharp note which in the distance had sounded like sleigh bells but now was very plainly a "peep-peep-peep." This was followed by many more and was echoed all around the pond by the other frogs in hiding. When the frog stopped for a rest the bubble disappeared.

"He doesn't open his mouth to sing, does he?" asked the boy.

"No," replied the Jogalong. "They make the sound entirely in that song bag of their and in their throats."

All at once out of the stillness came a loud croaking voice, deep and low. "Better-go-round, better-go-round, better-go-round," it croaked.

"That's old Grandfather Bull Frog," said the Jogalong. "There he is under that lily pond leaf."

"He's just talking, but just for fun we'll fool him and follow his advice. Come on!" As they walked they snapped some twigs and Grandfather Bull Frog rolled the covering down over round his ball eyes, spread out his wide webbed feet, and using his two four-fingered hands, swam hastily out of sight.

When they reached the other side of the pond Grandfather Bull Frog had beaten them.

"Better-go-round, better-go-round, better-go-round," he croaked.

"Here, here," laughed the Jogalong. "That's what we have done. Change your tune, old thing!"

Whereupon the bull frog croaked as loudly as he could: "Be-drowned, be-drowned, be-drowned!"

"Not if we can help it," laughed the Jogalong again. "Not if we can help it." And just as he was laughing at the bull frog he—but read next week's Jogalong tale.

The Guess-Mes

The first says:
I have wings.
I can turn somersaults and I am an excellent diver.
I make a great whirring noise when I move.
If people are not careful of me I am very likely to cause them harm by falling.
I do not travel on land.
I do not travel on the sea.
I am proud of my large—well it begins with P.

The second says:
I always have wood about me somewhere. In fact, I am usually made of it.
I have many, many corners.
I like to stay in one place.
People like me best in stormy weather and when it is cold.
I am afraid of fire.
My friends walk around inside of me, sit down and lie down inside of me, even dance inside of me but I do not mind. I like to have them.
I am sometimes very large and sometimes cozy and small.
Can you draw both of the Guess-Me children in the same picture?
Draw them to keep.
