LUCRETIA

Lucretia was a fair maiden who lived in the fifth century before Christ. She became the wife of Collatinus, a near relation of Tarquin, the king of Rome and was a most loving and faithful wife and when he was called to war she pled that she might follow him, but he knowing what hardships she would have to bear would not permit it. And so when he rode away it was with the feeling that she would keep the home fires burning for him. After the Roman Army had besieged Ardea the young nobles in the camp began a discussion as to the character of their wives and they resolved to ride back and come upon them unawares.

At Rome, they found the King's daughters feasting and dancing, and having a good time. Then they rode on to the home of Collatinus and there they saw the beautiful Lucretia surrounded by her maidens busy at the loom.

When they came upon her they all said "Lucretia is the worthiest lady of them all."

But Sextus, the king's son fell madly in love with her and determined to win her for himself. So after they had all ridden back to camp he silently returned, and pretended to bring a letter from her husband asking her to treat him well for his sake. .....

Lucretia gave him a warm welcome and did her utmost to make his stay pleasant but when he began to make love to her she repelled him but he overcame her, and then rode secretly back to camp. ....

Then Lucretia sent for her husband and father and her kinsmen and relate what had happened adding: "If ye be men you will avenge it."

And they all swore to her that they would. Then she said: "I am not guilty; yet I must, too, share in the punishment of this deed, lest any should think they could be false to their husbands and live." And she drew a knife from her bosom and stabbed herself to the heart. At that sight her husband and father cried aloud but Jenius Brutus, her kinsman drew the knife from the dying Lucretia, and held it up and said; By this blood I swear that I will visit this deed upon Tarquin and his accursed race; neither shall any man hereafter be king of Rome lest he do a like wickedness."

When the facts were known the indignant people rose against the Tarquins, whom they expelled from the city of Rome, and they established a republican form of government.

This story is told by the historian, Livy and it has been the subject of many a poem and romance.

Shakespeare has made the fair young wife the subject of one of his poems.

HEALTH

Some one had a cold some time ago, and cured it in a day by the following means. First a teaspoon of soda and then a glass of orange juice four times during the day.

After a night's rest the cold was entirely gone.

There are very few colds that will hang on, if such prompt measures will be taken. Physicians are talking now of the great extension of life, and we believe it is largely due to observing the rules of health, and keeping ourselves fit.

LE MODE

In case you have the personalty for it, there is a clever way to offset the severity of the satin evening gown; the kind of gown almost tailored in its simplicity and without ornamentation. You put a fluffy ring of uncurled ostrich, in the shade of the gown, half way between the wrist and elbow of your left arm and you carry an uncurled ostrich fan to match.

How to tell the queen of the circus from the queen of the mode is one of the current problems. Spangles! Evening coatees that are spangles and nothing else but. Evening turbans likewise. Evening gowns with bodies solidly spangled and with spangled panels and scarfs. Even, if you must know, spangled garters and an occasional pair of spangled evening slippers.

You remember the romantic musical comedy milkmaid in a laced kirtle? Well, the laced kirtle has been taken over by some of London's chic brides. The snug bodice of the bridal gown is slashed down the front in order to be drawn together again with a white silk cord. Now and then the corded kirtle-front effect is achieved merely by horizontal rows of shirring with a cord down the middle.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

If the sink is one yard high from the floor washing dishes and other work there will be much easier.

The wisest parents wish to understand and help rather than to dictate to their children.

Attractive garnishes often make the difference between an appetizing dish than an uninteresting one.

Apples baked in maple sirup, with a piece of butter in the center, will be a rich satisfying dessert for dinner.

If the feet are tender and swell, a nightly bath of warm water with a little salt or soda in it will give relief.

A good workman is known by his tools, so the home maker buys kitchen utensils of good quality and takes good care of them.

Risk of broken china is lessened by slipping a short piece of rubber hose over the end the water faucet.

SHORE COMMISSIONERS MEET

Presidents of the Boards of County Commissioners of the nine Eastern Shore Counties met in Easton on Thursday of last week.

Among various recommendations made by the Shore officials was one for the establishment of a home for the aged somewhere on the Shore, and the elimination of the present system of alms houses. This measure has been advocated by the Shore Commissioners group at every meeting since the formation of the body.

A change in the automobile laws of the state, to authorize issuance of license tags from the office of the County Treasurer, of the various counties, was also recommended by the Commissioners at their Easton meeting. This has also been advocated by the Commissioners from time to time, and is a measure that has the support of people throughout the State.

The new assessment of property scheduled for 1932, did not meet with the approval of the Commissioners body, they recommending that this assessment be deferred until 1935. They also recommended that a law be enacted reducing the State compulsory school tax to 60 cents.

At their meeting Thursday the Commissioners appointed a Committee to visit Annapolis and urge the passage of all legislation recommended by their body. The next meeting of the Commissioners will be held at Easton on April 20th.

FEDERAL SEED LOAN REGULATIONS

APPLICATIONS FROM KENT COUNTY FARMERS INCREASE

The Kent County Drought Committee has received official notice of amendments to regulations governing loans of Federal funds for drought relief.

The new arrangement allows $75.00 out of a possible $600 total to be used for the purchase of feed for dairy cows, hops, poultry, where formerly no loans were permissable for this purpose.

The second amendment raises the limit which may be loaned to all the tenants of any one landlord in any one county from $600 to $2000. This will be of great help to the large land holders who desire to carry their tenants. It should be mentioned, however, that now and previously, tenants may borrow $600 each, if their credit is acceptable to the Government, if the holder of crop mortgages will sign a waiver, and if the tenant cannot get credit locally.

Interest in securing loans is increasing. Each day new applications are being made. Those needing aid for the specified purposes of the loan are urged to inquire as to conditions under which loans are made. The Committee handles the "red tape." The seeker of a loan signs a few papers and pays a Notary one fee. Loans are available from the Government for those who can offer security for the loans, provided no local loans are procurable.

IF you need a LOAN—LEARN THE FACTS. The County Agent is ready at all hours to serve those needing such loans and being eligible for them.

HIGH SCHOOL LOSES TO CAMBRIDGE

Both the Chestertown Girls and Boys team lost to Cambridge last Tuesday night.

The boys team from the local High School scored more baskets than the Cambridge team, but the Cambridge teams ability to shoot fouls, of which they had many opportunities, won for them.

Cambridge got an early lead but Chestertown cut it down to three points at half time.

At the beginning of the seconed half Chestertown continued their rally and went into the lead the score being 21-19. Cambridge however came back strong and did not allow Chestertown to keep the lead more than a few moments. The second half was hard fought throughout, but Cambridge managed to win 31 to 28.

The girls team of Chestertown High School had an off night and lost by the score 22 to 9.
