THE TRANSCRIPT

THE COUNTY Commissioners are to be congratulated in their management of the county affairs and in the tax rate of $1.67 which they declared Friday. But for $36,372.52, which they were compelled to provide to take care of the interest on the $1,000,000 road bonds, the rate would have been about $1.47. The State Roads Commission will take care of the $80,000 of the outstanding road bonds due July 1, 1931.

WEDDING NOTES

The wedding of Miss Clara Vickers Elliott, granddaughter of Mrs. Harrison W. Vickers, of Chestertown, and Mr. Joseph Gilespie Armstrong, 3rd, was solemonized at the Pro Cathedral Baltimore at noon on Monday. The ceremony was performed by Bishop Heflestine assisted by Canon Arrow Smith. The bride was beautifully gowned in white satin with a lace veil and carried white roses and lilies. She was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. George Vickers. Mrs. Lee, the Matron of Honor, wore a dress of blue lace and carried pink snap dragons and delphiniams.

They will return after their honeymoon to their home in Millersville, near Annapolis, where the groom is rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church of that place.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Foster Gibson announce the marriage of their daughter, Mary Bartus Hatcherson to Mr. James Franklin Davis, Saturday, June sixth, nineteen hundred and thirty-one by the Rev. James F. Earner, at Sacred Heart Rectory in Chestertown, Maryland. The ceremony was witnessed by the bride's mother and sister, Miss Jane Hatcherson, the groom's sisters, Mrs. Irving Smith, of Denton, and Mrs. William Owens, of Betterton, a cousin, Mrs. Benjamin Zimmerman, of Rock Hall and Mr. Owens. The bridal couple went on a short trip that took them to Baltimore and Philadelphia and are spending a week with Prof. and Mrs. Smith in Denton.

Miss Gladys Everett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Everett, of near Chetertown and H. Jackson Reed, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Reed, of Chestertown, were quietly married on Sunday afternoon, June 7th at 2 o'clock in St. James M. P. Church, by the Reverend J. L. Marker. They were attended by Mr and Mrs. George Pennington, the latter a sister of the bride. They will reside in Chestertown.

FURROWS

Settin round the store t' other night wuz me and Jim and Ezra and Zach and several others, and after talkin fer quite a spell about the weather and crops, and fust one thing an' another, somebody mentioned politics. Ezra 'lowed that it wuz about time fer the politicians to begin to git busy fer next year as we have to elect a President and somebody ought to start somethin. Zack Peters 'owed it wuz too soon to talk much about that, fer the politicians ain't decided yet who is to be the people's choice.

Tow Barclay said he didn't care who wuz elected President if it would jest help business a little, but he couldn't see no difference, fer it jest looked like nobody wuz goin to buy no more'n they had to. Zeke Thompson 'lowed that the President didn't have nuthin to do with business; that it seemed to him that it wuz mostly a matter of supply and demand. And Tom sez, "Well, I've got the supply all right, but I ain't got no demand."

Ezra spoke up an' sez, "Well, who is goin to be the Republican candidate?" "Well," sez I, "there ain't much doubt about that, fer Mr. Hoover is boun to git the nomination if he wants it, and I ain't heard nobody say as how he has said anything agin takin it. But what I want to know is who the Democrats is goin to run. I been hearin a lot of people say as how they will have a hard time findin a man who can win." "Well," sez Hiram Scott, "there's Mr. Ritchie. He'd make a strong candidate." "No," sez Ezra, "he won't do. He's too wet. The Democrats will have to pick a dry man this time to beat Mr. Hoover." "Well," sez Jim Williams, "How about Mr. Young? He's a big business man, and he framed the Young Plan for the Germans to pay their debts by. He ought to be able to run the Gov'ment so as ever'body could get all that is comin to them." "He won't do," sez Ezra, "The common people won't vote fer him because of his connections. They'd be afraid he'd let the trusts git a strangle hold on the country. They'll never nominate him." "How about Roosevelt then?" sez Jim. "He won't do neither," sez Ezra. "Tamany will keep him from being elected. The people ain't got no confidence in a man that is backed by Tamany." "Well," sez Jim, "I been reading the papers some and I see where a lot of fellers has been mentioned. There's Baker, who wuz one of Woodrow Wilson's right-hand men during the war. He might make a good man fer the job. And then there's Cox. He's bein talked of a lot now." "Well," sez Ezra, "Baker might make a good man fer the job if he could get it, but he won't. And as fer Cox, we ain't quite fergot how bad he wuz beat in 1920, and that by a dark hoss too. No sir, he won't do. And it won't do no good to put up any man from the South, because nobody from the South can carry enough States to be elected. Besides, there ain't many down there to pick from. Joe Robinson, and Hull, and Dan Moody are all fairly good men, but none of 'em is strong enough to win. The Democrats haven't got any real good men to pick from. What we need now is another Woodrow Wilson to lead us out of thee woods. Now, gentlemen, there wuz a man!"

"Well," sez Jim, "I guess we'll have to find a dark hoss to run in at the last minute, and maybe we can win the election this time." Jerry Johnson spoke up and sez, "We might run this Congressman from Massachusetts by the name of Coolidge. A lot of Republicans might think they wuz votin fer Cal and help us elect him." "Well," sez Ezra, "that would be a right good trick if we could git away with it. But the Republicans ain't such fools as that. No sir, it looks like we are in a bad way fer a candidate."

"Well," sez Zack, "I think you'd better let the politicians git together and pick the feller they want and then all go and vote fer him like we always do. I ain't worryin' my head none about who is the best man. We won't git him noway."

"Well,'" sez Zeke, "it's gittin late and I got a lot of milkin to do in the mornin, so I'll jest be going along home so I kin git some sleep." And with that the meeain broke up.

Uncle Jed sez maybe President Hoover won't call a special session of Congress because he thinks some of the Democrats may die before next December, and then Congress could be organized again on the basis of the "full dinner pail."

'Member the time when the slogan wuz, "Vote fer free silver and watch wheat go to a dollar a bushel?"
