Dream of Sylvia Saved Him

By JOHN FRANCIS

(©, 1931, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) (WNU Service.)

JERRY FRANKLIN'S arms circled about Sylvia Dwyer, and their lips met and clung in a long kiss.

An instant later Jerry awoke with a start. Rubbing his eyes as he sat up in bed Jerry asked himself: "What in the world made me dream of her?"

When he had retired the night before, Jerry had been in love with Elinor Preston. In fact, his engagement to Elinor had just been announced. And then he had dreamed of Sylvia Dwyer, a girl he had not seen in eleven years.

True, Sylvia was the first girl Jerry had ever kissed. But that kiss took place when Jerry was sixteen and Sylvia fourteen. Jerry's family had left St. Louis shortly after that, and Jerry never had seen Sylvia since. For that matter he had not even thought of her. In the meantime he had finished college, entered his father's offices and fallen in love with Elinor Preston.

Elinor, tall, slender and dark, with a high forehead and sparkling, intelligent eyes, had been Jerry's ideal for more than two years. Sylvia, as Jerry remembered her, was an entirely different type. Blond with blue eyes she had possessed a baby face. She was pretty, but in a doll-like way.

"I wonder," Jerry said to himself at breakfast, "if I am in love with Sylvia subconsciously. It would be terrible if I were to marry Elinor and then found out that I love Sylvia. I've got to do something about it. But what?"

Jerry couldn't put his mind on his work at all that day. Late that afternoon as Elinor sat on the divan in her living room, Jerry paced the floor in front of her.

"What's troubling you, Jerry?" she asked. "You look terribly serious."

"I am, Elinor. And I don't know how to begin telling you about it," Jerry said despondently.

"Sit down here, darling, and tell me all about it."

It was a hard job, but Jerry finally blurted out the story of his dream and of the worry it had caused him.

"I hope you will try to understand, Elinor," he said as he finished. "I should like to see Sylvia before you and I get married. It might ruin both of our lives if we married and then learned I love some one else."

"I do understand," Elinor assured him. "I love you and want you to be happy. You do what you think best and I'll abide by the result. If you find that you really love Sylvia and not me, I shall hate to lose you, but I shan't try to hold you against your wishes."

"You are a peach, Elinor," Jerry said, grasping her hands. "I knew you would understand. I am going to St. Louis to see if I can find Sylvia. Even though I find that I really love her, I hope you and I shall always be friends."

"We shall, Jerry," said Elinor reassuringly. The tears were beginning to press hard against her eyelids, and because she did not want Jerry to see her cry, she added quickly "And now you had better run if you want to catch your train."

As she and Jerry reached the door Elinor said:

"I'd like to kiss you good-by, Jerry, and good luck."

The kiss over, Elinor held her tears back until Jerry was out of the house. Then she fled to her room where she cried for an hour.

Two days later just as Elinor was carrying two traveling bags downstairs the doorbell rang. Her mother had hardly opened the door before Jerry burst in. Dashing over to Elinor, he asked:

"Are you going away?"

"Just for a visit," Elinor replied.

"Must you go away?" Jerry pleaded.

"Why should I stay here? Didn't you bring Sylvia back with you?"

"Oh, darling," said Jerry, "I saw her in St. Louis yesterday and then took the next train back. She is blond and baby-faced. She giggles because she thinks it is cute, and she has an idea all men are crazy about her. Let's not talk about her any more. Now—must you go on this visit?"

"Would you rather have me stay in town?"—asked Elinor.

"Well, not exactly," said Jerry. "Inasmuch as you've got your bags all packed, how about going away with me on a honeymoon trip? We can get married at City hall on our way to the station. What do you say?"

"This," said Elinor, "is my answer." And dropping both bags she let them tumble the rest of the way down the stairs as she kissed Jerry.

Wall Street

Anthony J. Drexel on disembarking from the Majestic was asked what he thought of the situation in Wall Street.

"I have retired, thank goodness," he said, "and all I know is that these storms and crashes are bad for the street. They give it a bad name.

"I heard in the smoking room a story about a farmhand who looked up from his newspaper and said:

"'Terrible stock crash. Wot's this here Wall Street game of stocks and shares anyhow?'

"'Well, it's like this,' said another farmhand. 'You give me a nickel, and I buy a nickel cigar on tick. I smoke the cigar, you watch me. I'm a director, you see, and you're a shareholder. I take all the risks.'"

Divisions of Ship's Crew

The crew of a ship is divided into three departments. The first is the deck department. The captain, first, second, third and fourth mates, the boatswain, able seamen, ordinary seamen and radio operators belong to this department. In the engineering department there are the chief engineer, second, third, fourth and junior engineers, firemen, greasers, water tenders and coal passers. Those belonging to the steward's department are the chief steward, second steward, cook, second cook, mess steward and mess boy.

The Children's Corner

Edited by DOROTHY EDMONDS

Greedy Island

In my Airplane to Greedy Isle,
I went one afternoon,
'Tis many thousand miles away,
Afar beyond the moon;
And there I found the queerest tribe
Of boys and girls, I ween,
They really are quite different,
From any you have seen.

This country is most beautiful,
As fair as our own land;
The streets are broad and cleanly kept,
The buildings tall and grand;
But all these funny children
In this isle I went to see,
Have eyes right in the very place,
Their "tummies" ought to be.

I noticed when their mothers called
For them to come to meals,
They answered—tumbling with a rush,
With greedy grunts and squeals;
They pushed and crowded right and left,
Each scrambling for a place,
And not one paused a moment,
Nor bowed his head for grace.

They never waited to be served,
When once they had a seat,
But reached for things, and without shame
Began at once to eat;
And not one used a knife nor fork,
But dived into his food,
With little fingers all unwashed,
I'm sure you'd think them rude.

And when they'd stuffed their little selves,
'Till they could eat no more,
There yet would be upon their plates
Enough for three or four;
These greedy little children
Wanted all that they could see,
Because their eyes are in the place
Their "tummies" ought to be.

—Margaret Wheeler Ross.

BOWELS need watching

Let Dr. Caldwell help whenever your child is feverish or upset; or has caught cold.

His simple prescription will make that bilious, headachy, cross boy or girl comfortable, happy, well in just a few hours. It soon restores the bowels to healthy regularity. It helps "break-up" a cold by keeping the bowels free from all that sickening mucus waste.

You have a famous doctor's word for this laxative. Dr. Caldwell's record of having attended over 3500 births without the loss of one mother or baby is believed unique in American medical history.

Get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin from your drugstore and have it ready. Then you won't have to worry when any member of your family is headachy, bilious, gassy or constipated. Syrup Pepsin is good for all ages. It sweetens the bowels; increases appetite—makes digestion more complete.
