FURROWS

There's a lot of talk about the Federal Farm Board and what it's goin to do about the wheat situation. Of course there's a lot of politics in all these newspaper articles, but in the end it's goin to be more serious than a lot of politicians think. That's my way of thinkin anyway. I wuz talkin to Jed Hadaway about it jest the other day and he's got it sized up about right. He sez the whole thing wuz a mistake from the beginnin. Mr. Hoover ain't no farmer and he don't know what the farmers need, and this here Board was jest in the shape of another bone that the Gov'ment throwed out fer them to gnaw on.

It wuz jest like all the rest of the schemes that the politicians hatched up to git the farmers to vote fer 'em. That Land Bank wuz another vote gitter, but there wuz a trick in that scheme. It wuz planned so that a lot of fellers could git the farmer's land without payin much fer it. Jed sez it has turned out jest like he said it would when the law was passed. But when it comes to this Farm Board, Jed sez that it can't do the small farmer no good, and that it can do a mighty little fer the big ones. Mr. Legge started out buyin wheat. Well, that wouldn't help none unless the market wuz cornered and that's a mighty hard thing to do. There wuz a feller by the name of Patterson tried that on wheat a few years ago and he went broke fer his pains. Then agin, a feller by the name of Sullivan tried to corner the cotton market awhile back and he went broke. So I reckon if the Farm Board tried to corner the market it would go broke too. But Mr. Legge bought a lot of wheat, and now Mr. Stone wants to sell it. And the Board has a fight on its hands if it does sell, fer some Senators is goin to make it hot fer somebody, and I reckon they are about right. With a bumper crop in sight it would be downright mean to sell now and help put the price down lower. It would-ve been a lot better to use that wheat to help feed the people in the drought areas last winter than to hold it and let them people suffer and starve as some of 'em did. If buyin that wheat last year helped some farmers it's goin to hurt a lot more of 'em this year. It might be a good thing fer us little fellers here in the East if some of them big wheat farmers in the West would go broke and quit farmin.

Mr. Legge knows a lot about makin and sellin farm tools, but to my mind he don't know much about helpin the farmers. He has got a monopoly on makin farm implements and a high tariff to help him keep the prices up so as he can be a big success at runnin a big corporation, but he ain't helped the farmers on neither side, while he wuz on the Farm Board nor while he wuz off of it. Now I don't know what Mr. Stone is goin to do. It looks like Mr. Hoover sees it wuz a mistake to buy all that wheat with Gov'ment money, and so he wants the wheat sold so as the Board can git some of the money back. It looks to me like a case of backin up. But the Board is in troubel no matter which way it goes.

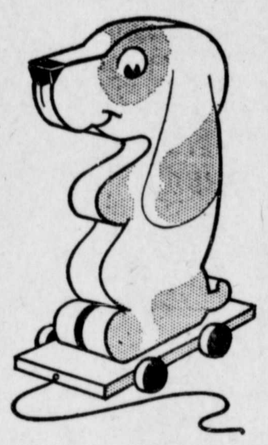

The politicians is all busy tryin to find out which is goin to be the worse fer the party so as they can play up the other side. All they want is to git their man elected and carry on fer another four years. But the Democrats has got a good chance now to git back into power if they don't go and make fools of theirselves over who is the right man to nominate. Uncle Jed sez that the Gov'ment can help the farmers by makin laws to protect their cooperatives from prosecution by the trusts, and also by givin them a protective tariff on all farm products. The cooperatives has done a lot of good and would be doin good now if some of them hadn't got crooked. But it's a funny thing about farmers: they won't stick together and play fair. But the farmers will have to have some relief from the high prices they have to pay fer machinery and tools. What they have to sell brings the lowest prices and what they have to buy brings the highest prices. If Mr. Legge wants to help us out he might try puttin the price down on what we have to buy from ihs corporation. That would be real help.

Historic Emerald

According to the classic legend Nero used to watch the combats of his gladiators through a monocle, the lens of which was an emerald, or, more probably, an Egyptian peridot. An emerald with a history was recently sold in London for $11,250. The vendor obviously appraised it as an octagonal specimen of size and quality without taking much heed of the tradition that, at the end of the Sixteenth century it had been brought to Austria from Turkey, and then set in an ecclesiastical monstrance. Later it was removed from this, was recut, and mounted as a ring.

Plymouth Rock Reunited

The secretary of the Pilgrim society says: "In 1774 the inhabitants of Plymouth decided to remove the famous rock to Town square and establish a shrine of liberty. When they attempted to raise it, however, it broke into two parts, one of which was permitted to remain and the other carried to its destination. It remained there until 1834, when it was

Definition of a Snob

Thackeray's definition of a snob is a classic of its kind. It expresses very neatly the characteristics of that regretable type of person. "A snob is that man or woman who are always pretending, before the world, to be something better—especially richer or more fashionable—than they are. It is one who thinks his own position in life contemptible, and is always yearning and striving to force himself into one above, without the education or characteristics which belong to it; one who looks down upon, despises, and overrides his inferiors, or even equals of his own standing, and is ever ready to worship, fawn upon, and flatter a rich or titled man, not because he is a good man, a wise man, or a Christian man; but because he has the luck to be rich or consequential."

Too Much ACID

MANY people, two hours after eating, suffer indigestion as they call it. It is usually excess acid. Correct it with an alkali. The best way, the quick, harmless and efficient way, is Phillips Milk of Magnesia. It has remained for 50 years the standard with physicians. One spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in stomach acids, and at once. The symptoms disappear in five minutes.

You will never use crude methods when you know this better method. And you will never suffer from excess acid when you prove out this easy relief.

Get genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia, the kind that physicians have prescribed for over 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drugstore.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.
