When BABIES are Upset

BABY ills and ailments seem twice as serious at night. A sudden cry may mean colic. Or a sudden attack of diarrhea. How would you meet this emergency—tonight? Have you a bottle of Castoria ready?

For the protection of your wee one—for your own peace of mind—keep this old, reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an everyday aid. It's gentle influence will ease and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. It's mild regulation will help an older child whose tongue is coated because of sluggish bowels. All druggists have Castoria.

Happy Moon Legends

Na-quil.

Many suns and moons and snows ago there was born to Na-quil, god of the sky, and his wife, a son.

Now Na-quil, who had all the storms, rain and snow to attend to, as well as the thunder and lightning, was very busy. But just the same he sat down on the edge of a cloud and tried to think of the best gift he could give his son.

Because he lived in the sky, Na-quil was very fond of blue. And Na-quil remembered that once he had seen a blue stone exactly the color of the sky.

So Na-quil pounded on the edge of the cloud and Kee Yay, his helper, came running.

"Blue beads are the finest things in the world," said Na-quil. "My son shall have many blue beads. I'd better fly down and ask Ools Kah Stee where those stones are."

"Here are your wings," and Kee Yay handed him the claws, beak and wings of a golden eagle. The wings are seven feet from tip to tip and Kee Yay can hardly lift them.

"While you are flying, are you going by that valley over there? It is only a thousand miles, and they need rain badly," said Kee Yay.

"No, I'm in a hurry to get the beads," said Na-quil. "Ools Kah Stee goes to bed with the sun. I must hurry."

"But, the Great Valley needs rain badly," said Kee Yay.

"I'll send them some," promised Na-quil.

Na-quil had put on all of his eagle suit except one wing. He had not put his arm into the right wing yet, so with his free hand he gathered up a cloud and rolled it into a ball. Then he threw the ball a thousand miles into the valley. The ball hit against a hill on the other side of the Great Valley. Then they had rain in the Great Valley, and Na-quil flew down to visit Ools Kah Stee.

Ools Kah Stee is a great snake. He lives down in the earth and he is king of the Under-ground. His name means "Fearless," but when he saw Na-quil flying toward him he moved near his hole.

"Good flying to you," said Ools Kah Stee.

"The same—I mean, I wish you good weather," said Na-quil.

"The weather could be better," replied Ools Kah Stee, looking over toward the Great Valley. "But can I do something for you?"

"Yes, I am going to give my son a string of blue beads to wear when he is older. Will you give me some of your sky-stones?"

"If you will stop the storm that is flooding the Great Valley you can have all you wish."

"I'll stop the storm," said Na-quil. "Good-by."

Na-quil dipped his wings in the waters and then shook out his feathers and the water dried up.

Na-quil had dried up most of the waters when he came to a waterfall high up in the mountain.

This was the very place where the storm ball had struck and it had knocked down a little tree. The tree lay across the stream and the rocks held it so it could not get away.

It was a brave little tree and though the river pounded it and threw rocks and branches at it and bent it, the little tree would not break. Every time it was bent it sprang back straight.

Its bark was cut and its branches broken, but it sang a song to the angry river.

"This tiny tree fights better than any large one I ever saw," said Na-quil. "Even though it is torn from its roots and is soon to die, it sings."

Through the cut bark Na-quil could see the white heart of the tree.

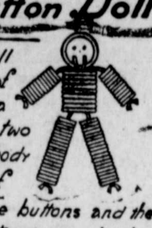

"What a strong heart," he said. "It will be a better gift for my son than many blue beads. I shall give it to him."

So Na-quil stopped the river and picked up the little tree. He flew to the mountain where he had left his wife and his little brown son. He hurried into the house. The baby winked and blinked at Na-quil, and once when the baby's eyes winked shut, Na-quil caused the strong heart of the tree to enter and live in his son.

When other people heard of this, they named the boy Strong Heart.

Kennedyville upset the dope on Saturday afternoon at Washington Field, Chestertown when they handed the strong Rock Hall team a 6to 4 defeat.

The game was a home game for Kennedyville and they decided to play at Chestertown thinking they would have a larger crowd. There was a big turnout.

Rock Hall out-hit Kennedyville 10 to 8, but the Kennedyville hits were more timely.

Kennedyville has not lost a game this second half season and is tied with Church Hill for first place.

Galena defeated Millington last Saturday at Galena in a fourteen inning contest 5 to 4.

Galena made 12 hits while Millington collected only 5. Millington had very few men on bases during the game but were able to score 4 runs.

Galena seemed unable to get the men across the plate and it was not until the 14th inning that the game was decided.

CHILDREN CRY FOR IT—

CHILDREN hate to take medicine as a rule, but every child loves the taste of Castoria. This pure vegetable preparation is just as good as it tastes; just as bland and just as harmless as the recipe reads.

When Baby's cry warns of colic, a few drops of Castoria have him soothed, asleep again in a jiffy. Nothing is more valuable in diarrhea. When coated tongue or bad breath tell of constipation, invoke its gentle aid to cleanse and regulate a child's bowels. In colds or children's diseases, you should use it to keep the system from clogging.

Castoria is sold in every drug store; the genuine always bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature.
