Bostonese

She was a Boston provincial, and smacked of the Back bay. Approaching a clerk in one of Fifth avenue's swankiest millinery shops she said quite patronizingly: "I'm from Boston and would like something a trifle smart without being the least bit showy." "I get you, ma'am, sort of second mourning," replied the experienced saleslady, adding "I once lived in Boston myself."

How to Better Poor Posture

Bodily poise is just as important as social poise to the really attractive woman. Poor posture will spoil the effect of the most expensive gown, but if posture is poor, it's easy to improve it, Kathleen Howard writes in Harper's Bazaar.

"Here is one way to do it," she writes. "Stand in front of your mirror, without your clothes, and turn sideways. You may see reflected a bad case of swayback. If you do, put one hand below your waist on your back and put the other in front, on your abdomen. Then roll the tip of your spine under and up, at the same time keeping your head well up. It really works."

Good Hard Work Used to Foil Breaks in Jails

Harrisburg, Pa.—Pennsylvania prisoners are too tired to riot, according to State Welfare Secretary John L. Hanna, who attributes hard work for the prisoners as the most effective deterrent on prison outbreaks.

Hanna said that 878 men in four state institutions are regularly employed at trades for which they are fitted. Others are given temporary work or are used on construction projects at the prisons.

While contending that overcrowding has been a leading cause of riots in other states and that Pennsylvania temporarily faces similar conditions pending construction of the new Eastern penitentiary, Hanna held the prison work program is balancing the overcrowded condition to keep disturbances among prisoners to a minimum.

"Eight hours a day of healthful, hard labor keeps a man close to normal life and leaves him comfortably tired at night with little inclination to conspire for rioting," Hanna said.

"Nothing, however, can be said to be a sure preventive."

If baby has COLIC

A CRY in the night. Colic! No cause for alarm if Castoria is handy. This pure vegetable preparation brings quick comfort, and can never harm. It is the sensible thing when children are ailing. Whether it's the stomach, or the little bowels; colic or constipation; or diarrhea. When tiny tongues are coated, or the breath is bad. Whenever there's need of gentle regulation. Children love the taste of Castoria, and its mildness makes it safe for frequent use.

And a more liberal dose of Castoria is always better for growing children than strong medicine meant only for adult use.

Fletcher's CASTORIA

SOUR STOMACH

JUST a tasteless dose of Phillips Milk of Magnesia in water. That is an alkali, effective, yet harmless. It has been the standard antacid for 50 years. One spoonful will neutralize at once many times its volume in acid. It is the right way, the quick, pleasant and efficient way to kill the excess acid. The stomach becomes sweet, the pain departs. You are happy again in five minutes.

But don't depend on crude methods, try the best way yet evolved in all the years of searching. That is Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia, the kind that the physicians prescribe.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

Questions:

1. Why does a chameleon change color?
2. What makes thunder?
3. Is there really a man in the moon?
4. What are shooting stars, really?

Answers:

1. The inner layer of the chameleon's skin is lined with a series of tiny pigment or color cells. When these expand or grow larger, and contract or grow smaller, the chameleon changes color. For instance, when the yellowish-green cells expand the chameleon turns orange, and if the reddish cells contract the chameleon becomes brown or black.

2. Did you ever scuff your feet on a thick rug, then touch something metal with the tips of your fingers and watch the tiny spark it makes and hear the little "snaps"? Thunder is just a very large "snap" like that, after an electrical flash.

3. Perhaps there is, and perhaps there isn't. Some people even say the moon isn't made of green cheese, but that the little holes and bumps we see on its surface are really empty lakes and mountains and craters.

4. Shooting stars, or meteors, are small heavenly bodies that the earth meets on its path around the sun. When they strike our atmosphere, they fall through it so swiftly that they become heated by the friction of the air and burn up in a blaze of fire even before they reach the earth.

BETTY—"But, Jane, who carries Gorham patterns in town?"

THE TURN OF THE TIDE

BY ALICE MATTHEWS

O the turn of the tide will truly be
A wonderful aid for you,— for me:
For nothing keeps just the same yes see
And the rolling tide of this Life's Sea
Is a force persuasive we must know,
For wonder waves certainly show
The Hand Divine that effort guides,
And also powers the flow of tides.

O the turn of the tide is coming soon,
So in your heart keep up the tune
Of growing gladness, let abide
The thought God over guides the tide
Of human life—allow no lack
Of faith today to hold you back
From venturing bravely on Life's Sea,
Remember, "whats to be, will be!"

All the country were shocked and grieved when the news came that James Alfred Pearce Dennis was no more. He was such an outstanding man, trusted and honored by the three last presidents. Not long ago he stood on the platform of William Smith Hall and received an honorary degree while the portrait of the judge and sometime president of the College, seemed to look down in approval of his namesake.

People are too prone to think of suicide when things happen which they cannot explain.

How probable it might be that being unable to sleep the lure of the sea called him, and as he walked beside it the waves enfolded him in their bosom, and then brought him back to land.

Cantaleoupes! Corn! Beans! Tomatoes! Peaches! how often we hear the sound and how disappointing to the venders to hear that they have already been bought from others. Mother Earth has certainly brought forth abundantly this year. Does it not seem that we should conserve the abundance now, so that when drouth comes we would be prepared for the worst.

Old Judge Pearson lived in the mountains of North Carolina during the time of the Civil war and after. He was noted as being a most just judge. One occasion in Court a certain witness named Sarah Money was to be called but as she was too sick to appear the Judge said, "We will proceed without Sarah Money." How the lawyers laughed at the pun! That evening one of the lawyers was telling his wife of the Judge's wit. He told her that there was a witness named Mary Money and how the judge had said. "We will proceed without Mary Money" But I do not see the point" said his wife. "Neither do I, replied her husband, but I saw it when I was in court."

The Judge was considered rather "near," but he fell in love, and when he was married, he gave the hard-worked poorly paid clergyman one hundred dollars in gold. Although the clergyman was charged to keep it a secret the news spread everywhere along the mountain side. Who spilled the beans? They did not know.

The carnival is over. All honor to the firemen who do such unselfish work, but it is sad to see the grass in the square tramped under foot. Where are the camp fire girls this season, that they have not planted flowers in the old fountain? Let it be hoped that they will not forget next year.

After reading in that very informing book by Dinet on the "Art of Thinking," which speaks of the puzzle as the greatest aid to concentration of the mind, and having faithfully solved one every day, it is rather discouraging to read some remarks by an English professor condeming the practice because he thinks it lowers one's intelligence. So what is one to do under these circumstances?

I know of a man who has a passion for accumulating not money, but clocks. Clocks of all kinds adorn his room from the grandfather's clock to the tiniest one that a ten cent piece might cover. David Ramsey whose body lies in Wesminster Abbey, added to his fame through making clocks. The Strasburg clock, which was invented so long ago by a clock maker, and when delivered the town council had his eyes put out, so he could not make another, is one of the curios which the tourist is always eager to see.

NOW AND THEN

September with her glorious days! She certainly gave the school children a warm welcome, as they assembled at school. There is something stirring in the sound of the school bell and the young faces of the children with their books, on their way to their studies. It seems to say. Go to work all, vacation is over.

Do not forget the Flower Show today at the New Armory. It will be not only a gratification to our senses to see the groups of flowers but will be an encouragement to the promoters to try again.
