POISON
in Your bowels!

Poisons absorbed into the system from souring waste in the bowels, cause that headachy, sluggish, bilious condition; coat the tongue; foul the breath; sap energy, strength and nerve-force. A little of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will clear up trouble like that, gently, harmlessly, in a hurry. The difference it will make in your feelings over night will prove its merit to you.

Dr. Caldwell studied constipation for forty-seven years. This long experience enabled him to make his prescription just what men, women, old people and children need to make their bowels help themselves. Its natural, mild, thorough action and its pleasant taste commend it to people of all ages. That's why "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin," as it is called, is the most popular laxative drugstores sell.

When PAIN Comes

WHAT many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which quickly neutralizes acids. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali neutralizes instantly many times as much harmful acid, and then the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go get a small bottle to try.

Get the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia, the kind physicians have prescribed for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drugstore.

Seek Church's Blessing on All Undertakings

The Slav people throughout the world hold more to religious customs than any of the peoples of western Europe. Many of these beautiful old customs were created and preserved by the Bulgarians during the five centuries under Turkish rule. The people, as a rule, also call upon the clergy to perform a ceremony for what would appear, in western Europe, most trivial things. In addition to the ceremony performed in the case of marriages, births and deaths, the cutting of the first sod and the laying of a foundation for a new house or public building, the opening of a new street, building, public garden, or a factory, etc., without a religious ceremony is considered as an ill omen. Immediately the roof is placed on a new house or building, a cross, blessed by the priest, with a wreath of flowers attached is hoisted and remains until the work is finally completed. In the villages certain ideas are carried to extreme limits, and the parish priest is called upon to perform all sorts of ceremonies, such as blessing the land, prayers for rain, storms and the harvest, etc.—Detroit News.

Castle of Sleeping Beauty

The ancestral castle of the counts of Eltz is one of the finest in Germany, resting high on a precipitous rock, with cloud-piercing tower and rimmed with dark green woods. This is the castle made famous by Sleeping Beauty, if legend is to be believed. It dates back to the Twelfth century and its gray walls have seen many a battle waged. It might almost be said to be three castles in one, grouped about an inner court, and each of the three has its own entry. It is full of the paraphernalia of dream-haunted rooms, heavy iron-bound chests, carved doors, old pewter, massive refectory tables which surely have often trembled beneath their loads of venison, wine and the thunderous merriment of feasters.

The Song of a Hat

A toodle, a toodle,
I made a fine hat
Of star-dust and pie-crust
With plenty of fat.

I trimmed it with parsley
And bottles of ink
And several pipes
From an old kitchen sink.

I trimmed it with marbles
And pieces of glue
And half of the lace
Of a last summer's shoe.

I trimmed it with turnips
And pieces of chalk,
And then put it on
And went out for a walk.

Happy Moon Legends

Strong Heart's Anger.

There was a time, O Little-ones-within-my wigwam, when the maple leaves did not turn red. The leaves of the maple tree were green all the year round. But then there was a battle.

Two tribes of warriors met in a forest. They fought for a long time, but by and by one tribe was beaten. The beaten warriors ran.

Only those too badly hurt to run were left. In a little grove of maple trees three of these lay hurt. They were cut and bleeding.

One said, "Little Robin, give me some of your feathers to press upon my wounds. I must stop their bleeding or I die. Give me your feathers, little Robin."

But the Robin had been frightened by the war cries. He had flown away.

"Little Rabbit," said the second warrior, "give me of your soft fur."

But the rabbit had been frightened by an arrow.

"Kind Trees," said the third warrior, "let me have your leaves. If we do not stop the bleeding of our wounds then we die."

"We would like to," answered the Willows, "but we are afraid Strong Heart would not like it."

"We would give you our leaves," said the Beeches, "but Strong Heart would not like it."

The Maples said nothing. But here and there there was a rustling. The Maples were dropping their leaves.

They dropped their leaves on the wounds of the Red-children. They made beds of leaves for the warriors to lie upon.

Now from far off Strong Heart had heard the battle. When he came near the grove of trees he saw something strange. He saw some trees without leaves.

"Strong Heart is angry," he said. "For this deed all of the trees shall be punished. All of the trees shall be dug up by the roots!"

He drove his great white spear into the ground below them as if to slay them. But then he had another thought.

"No, you have made yourselves ugly. For half the year you shall remain so. For half the year you shall stand here without your leaves."

So he pulled his white spear out of the ground and as he was doing so his foot touched something. It was a leaf. The leaf was quite red. Then Strong Heart looked further and saw the warriors. "Oh," said he, "Strong Heart is sorry. Strong Heart did not know. But it is a law that Strong Heart cannot change his words.

"'Tis true," said he, "you must lose your leaves each year, for so has Strong Heart said, but this time of the losing of your leaves shall be a gay time and not a time of sorrow. It shall be a time of bright colors, the sign of joy. And Maple shall be the brightest of you all. Maple shall wear the bright red leaf every autumn."

And so the trees do drop their leaves at the same time every year. And the Maple is the brightest of them all.

NOW AND THEN

A laugh is just like sunshine,
It freshens all the day,
It tips the peak of life with light,
And drives the clouds away;
The soul grows glad that hears it
And feels its courage strong;
A laugh is just like sunshine,
For cheering folks along.
—Anon.

There are times of depression, they say. People that have put their trust in uncertain riches see them vanish away. But if we go around with a cheerful face it will help a long way in keeping people spirits up and a long face casts a shadow wherever it goes.

Wm. Lyon Philps talks a great deal about his cat. He thinks its much more interesting than a dog. He says he loves to see it spring up in the feline graceful way.

But the moods of the cat are past human understanding. I read yesterday of a cat in New England who gave birth to a family of four high up in a tree, and when its human friends climbed up and took them from their airy height to a cosy place in the cellar, the mother purred as though she was satisfied. But the next morning there sat Tabby with her family in the tree. A few evennes ago a fine Persian disappeared from its home, and after a search it was found a long distance away up a tree. No coaxing could bring it down, so there was nothing to do, but to climb up and bring it down. Yes the ways of the feline are past finding out.

TWENTY MULE TEAM SMITH

The passing of Twenty Mule Team Smith was announced in the papers some time ago. No romance reads more thrillingly than did, his fortunes. Beginning his life as a poor laborer. one day when working in the Death Valley he saw a quantity of white earth and when he tasted it, he found it was borax. Keeping his secret he hired a team drawn by twenty mules and having established his claim he hauled the white earth to the city. It proved to be the finest of borax and it made Mr. Smith fabulously rich. He built a home that was the show place of California, Where tourists came from long distances to see the wonderful flowers. Having no children himself, he established a home for orphnas and all went well with him for awhile.

Having no business experience he married his stenographer and by her, had several children. But alas! he became the victim of those who wished to sell. Investments were urged upon him, and the consequence was that he died a poor man. His wife has a position and she and her children are living in a small house perhaps happier than when they were in other days.

The disappearing bathing suit it is certainly the topic of the day. And yet, sometime ago visiting the sea shore saw a number of people laughing. It was at an old fashioned bathing suit, with pants reaching below the knees and skirt almost as long The wearer had little chance of swimming as she was weighed down. But there is certainly a happy medium.

The following doggerel is copied from the Literary Digest which copied it from the Kansas Star:

Anyhow They Have Backbone.—

REVELATION

Something of chivalry he lacks
Who mentions girls behind their backs,
But they have always seemed to me
Compact of mist and mystery
And I am grieved, at this late date,
To learn hat they are vertebrate.

I miss the sight of pretty faces
At all the crowded bathing places,
For everywhere my eyes incline
On miles and miles of knobby spine.

Would it were in my power to see
Some beauty in bare vertebrae,
Instead of the absurdly solemn
Appearance of the spinal column—
Then I'd forego these ribald hoots
At vague, vestigial swimming suits.

Part of Noted Robinson Crusoe Island Vanishes

Santiago, Chile.—Six persons were killed when a part of the island of Juan Fernandez, 350 miles off Valparaso, suddenly glided into the ocean, it was announced by the war ministry. The disaster, which was attributed to effects of a strong storm and a tidal wave which swept it, affects Cumberland bay, the only harbor on the island, and surrounding hills.

It was Juan Fernandez island which inspired the book "Robinson Crusoe" by Daniel Defoe. That story is supposed to have been based on tales told by Alexander Selkirk, a sailor who was left on the island following a mutiny on his ship in the Seventeenth century. After the island became a possession of Chile, following Chilean independence in the Nineteenth century, it was used for years as a state prison.

Raindrop Starts Bank Alarm

Lynn, Mass.—A solitary raindrop called out the riot squad here. When half a dozen policeman arrived at the Sagamore Trust bank in McDonough square they discovered that one drop of rainwater had shortcircuited the burglar alarm.

It's a lot of fun to look at a tabloid and then at a regular newspaper to find out if it really happened. —Life.
