COURT CONVENES OCTOBER 19

TWO MURDER CASES TO BE TRIED HERE

The October term of the Circuit Court for Kent county will convene on Monday, October 19th. The criminal docket includes 18 cases on the appeal docket, and approximately 30 cases will be presented to the Grand Jury.

Most of the criminal docket is larceny cases where the amount involved was small.

Two murder cases, one from Cecil county and one from Talbot county will be tried here.

The case from Talbot county accuses Granvil Downs, a deputy sheriff, of Caroline County, with the murder of Arthur Wooters on March 25, 1931. A report of the case states that Downs while making an arrest, in Caroline county, followed Wooters into Talbot county and shot him to death while attempting to arrest him.

The case from Cecil county accuses McKinley Keith with the murder of Hassel Benton on November 1st, 1930. This case was removed to Queen Anne's county and tried last May resulting in the jury disagreeing.

KENT COUNTY'S BIG BUSINESS

Chestertown is the center of an rich agricultural section and our most industrious farmers have made little during the past few years. The county has no large manufacturing plant employing numbers of people yet there is no great problem of unemployment.

This fall an unusual amount of building of private homes of a high type is going on. The general appearance of the towns and outlying districts is good. Houses have been painted and grounds are kept in good condition. The period of depression has not yet made any apparent great inroads on the community. This is not announced smugly but gratefully.

Banks and towns and communities can not be kept going without financial backing and foundation and Kent County must have some one substantial and unfailing source of income, some one "big business." It has. That big bcsiness is Washington College.

Every year the amount of money that passes through the county via Washington College increases. The present enrollment of the student body numbers 270. It has been conservatively estimated that each student spends in Chestertown and in the county, at least $5.00 per week; at the rate of counting the scholastic year a matter of some 32 weeks there is a circulation of more than $40,000 annually. That does not take into account the various visitors from outside who came to spend a day, or a week, or the entire school term to be near sons and daughters who are attending college and that, in itself, is no small item.

The faculty members all have homes in Chestertown and the larger portion of their salary is turned back right hee for eveybody living.

A fair estimate of the entire sum passing through this community has been unofficially given by those in authority as being in the neighborhood of $220,000 a year and on an increasing scale.

Washington College contributes, however, even more than financial richness to the community in generously spreading its cultural side over the town and countryside. It gives to those who care to carry their thought beyond he daily papers and usual run of periodic reading matter, the privilege of hearing each week an outstanding speaker at the Thursday morning Assembly who takes up vital matters of the past or of the day; it has fostered an opportunity for community singing that has added much to the musical life of Chestertown and the country through the Kent County Choral Society which could not exist without the assistance of Washington Colege; annually it stages the Eastern Shore Insitute of the League of Womer Voters and brings an intensive program before our people.

When an institution has been in our midst for 150 years, it is apt to be taken as a matter of course but it should not be. Washington College has been driving ahead scholastically, bringing finer instructors to its student body and a finer student body to its instructors; funds have been provided to permit of a progressive program and the greatest advantage of the possibilities offered has been taen by the College authorities.

Washington College can well be regarded as Kent's big business and, in this day of world-wide depression, Kent's life-saver.

SCHREIBER—MULFORD

Announcement was made this week of the marriage of Miss Anna Mulford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Mulford, of Galena, and Mr. William Burgess Schreiber, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Schreiber, of Chestertown.

The marriage was performed at Elkton last Saturday, October 3rd. Mr. Schreiber is engaged in business with his father in Chestertown.

FINANCIAL RESPONSIBILITY LAW POPULAR

North Carolina, following the lead of California and other states, has adopted a Financial Responsibility Law for motorists.

The law, of the familiar pattern, provides that a person failing to satisfy a judgement shall have his license suspended until he gives proof of financial responsibility, either through an insurance policy or a personal corporate surety bond.

This type of law is finding increasing support throughout the nation, and it is noteworthy that demand for unconditional compulsory automobile casualty insurance of the Massachusetts kind, is seldom heard. The experience of the Bay State, with its congested courts, rising accident record, faked claims and increased insurance rates has acted as a warning to other commonwealths.

One can find little fault with the Financial Responsibility Law. Its principal virtue is that it puts the responsibility and cost where it belongs—on those who cause accidents—and does not penalize the careful, responsible driver. The negligent motorist holds the financial sack.

In all probability it will not be long before an appreciable number of states have similar laws to the benefit of the public at large.

WORLD WIND FLYERS HERE

The world-wind flyers are at the Chestertown Air Port today, and will remain until Tuesday, during which time they will stage demonstrations and carry passengers.

Mr. Joseph Rock, former Naval aviator with 14 years experience as an aviator will be in charge and will be assisted by Miss Dorothy Christy. Miss Christy is the smallest aviatrix weighing only 90 pounds.

Exhibition of "deadstick" landings, baloon busting and bomb dropping will be features during the three days.
