RITCHIE FOR PRESIDENT

In all parts of the country, whenever Democratic presidential timber is discussed, the name Albert C. Ritchie receives considerable attention. The time is ripe for the Democrats of Maryland to fight for a Marylander in the White House. The whole nation is becoming disgusted with Federal interference into the government of the States and the Maryland governor's slogan of "States Rights" is attracting nation wide attention. We predct that "Ritchie For President" will be heard in every part of the United States before next fall. He has proved himself an able statesman without straddling the fence on important affairs of the State. There has never been any question as to how he stands on important issues, which is admired in any man even by those who do not agree with him on the various questions. The fact that the voters of Maryland have elected him as Governor four successive times, each time with an increased majorty, proves that he will have the solid backing of his own state.

In your issue of November 7 in connection with an item stating that I was elected Vice-President of the Delaware Interscholastic Athletic Association you state: "The organization will endeavor to stop competition in athletic sports between the different schools of the State."

It would appear that such a statement was mine. Such is not the case.

At a recent meeting of a small percentage of ts members (among a number of things on the program) was an informal discussion on the topic of minimizing interscholastic activities and featuring to a greater extent intra-school activties. No formal action was taken by the Association and sides were presented for and against such an idea.

Should your paper be read in Delaware by some one interested in the D. I. A. A. considerable annoyance will result.

Will you please publish this letter.

Very truly yours,
DAVID McMENAMIN

CHANGES IN THE BIRD LIFE

BY S. E. PERKINS, III

CONSERVATION LECTURER OF MARYLAND

With the issuance of the 4th edition of the check-list of American birds (1931), after a lapse of twenty-one years since the 3rd edition, there are some startling facts shown in connection with the restriction in range of certain birds, due to their growing scarcity. I find that there are twelve bird species wherein Maryland is affected by the changes wrought by man's influence upon their life histories. The Carolina paraquet and Labrador duck, once commonly seen in this State, are entirely wiped out, not only in Maryland but in the whole hemisphere. The Great Auk was known to swim along the State's ocean front in migrations. Never again can it be looked for as it, too, is extinct .

The wild turkey and the heath hen, so numerous along our costal region in past times that everyone had a personal acquaintance with them are unknown there now. There are accounts telling of Nanticoke Indians of the Eastern Shore bringing in to early settlers hundreds of wild turkeys at a time to barter for tobacco and for trinkets. This game bird is getting such protection by law today, through the Game Division of Maryland, that it is increasing in numbers in the mountain counties of Western Maryland.

The heath hen, unfortunately, is doomed. Only one specimen (a male) is known to be alive of the last group and it is being protected on Martha's Vineyard Island. Maryland will never again know this bird kind in life.

Because of eggers' activities largely, the formerly well known gull-billed tern and the roseate tern are extirpated so far as Maryland is concerned. Its islands were a favorite nesting place of these species. Year after year their eggs were taken until the adults became discouraged and moved away.

The long-billed curlew, known by that name since 1812, regularly migrated north along the seaboard from Florida to Massachusetts but is now unknown east of the Mississippi River. It is still common in the far little-populated west.

The Eskimo curlew has not been seen alive in the United States since one was observed in April 1926 in Nebraska. It winged the waters of the Atlantic past the shores of Maryland in by-gone days. It is considered an extinct race.

The upland plover's breeding range includes Maryland but we do not often see the bird. This new bird list makes the startling statement that it is becoming generally rare.

Formerly the dickcissel sang its song, from which the bird's name originated in 1789, along Maryland's coastal plain. From some cause, likely the hunting of it, the bird has been seldom noted here for many years.

The avocet, now considered a western form, was known formerly to nest along the New Jersey coast and likely also in Maryland. Today it is regarded rare throughout that part of the United States east of the Mississippi River. It has been forced west by the changed conditions brought about in tidal flats and fresh water marshes by the vastly increased population of this and adjoining states.

A Text For Every One

What Comfort, what Strength, what Economy there is in Order—Material Order, Intellectual Order, Moral Order. To know where one is going and what one wishes—this is order: to keep one's word and one's engagements—again order; to have everything ready under one's hand, to be able to dispose of all one's forces and to have one's means of whatever kind under command—still order; to discipline one's habits, one's effort, one's wishes; to organize one's life; to distribute one's time, to take the measure of one's duties and make one's rights respected; to employ one's capital and resources, one's talent and one's chances profitably—all this belongs to and is included in the word order. Order means light and peace, inward liberty and free command over one's self; order is power. Order is man's greatest need and his true well-being. Order is the greatest need of business. It is the slogan and the inspiration of every progressive person, to establish it in one's life is to set the scene for assured success.
