WOMEN: watch your

BOWELS

What should women do to keep their bowels moving freely? A doctor should know the answer. That is why pure Syrup Pepsin is so good for women. It just suits their delicate organism. It is the prescription of an old family doctor who has treated thousands of women patients, and who made a special study of bowel troubles.

It is fine for children, too. They love its taste. Let them have it every time their tongues are coated or their skin is sallow. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is made from fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients.

When you've a sick headache, can't eat, are bilious or sluggish; and at the times when you are most apt to be constipated, take a little of this famous prescription (all drug stores keep it ready in big bottles), and you'll know why Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the favorite laxative of over a million women!

Dancing Advocated as Remedy for Human Ills

Not infrequently the alleged "quack" of one generation finds justification in the next, and the recommendation of dancing as a cure for mental and physical ills by so cautious a scientist as Sir Arthur Keith may rehabilitate the memory of Donald McAlpin, who a century ago set up as a healer by dancing a strathspey, writes a columnist in the Manchester (Eng.) Guardian. A shepherd and a famous dancer, Donald was reputed to have cured his mistress of a mysterious malady by dancing a reel with her, and this story being noised abroad his cottage was besieged by crowds of sick folk who hoped to rid their ailments by persuading him to dance with them.

Donald, whether he believed in his own power or not, was shrewd enough to take advantage of such a stroke of luck. He engaged an ancient piper as assistant, and between them the pair evolved a course of dancing treatment for almost every ill to which the flesh is heir, establishing an extensive practice from which, for a time, they derived a considerable income. The doctors, of course, denounced him as a charlatan, but it seems just possible that he hit on a real remedy for certain troubles.

Ruins of "Great Wall" in the Peruvian Andes

Like China, Peru once had a great wall—the "great wall of Peru." This wall was revealed in photographs of remote sections of the Peruvian Andes taken by the Shippee-Johnson aerial expedition. They reported the great wall as being near Huancayo along the ridge of the Andes east of Lima, Peru. As usual there is a good deal of skepticism regarding the authenticity of the find. But Philip A. Means, archeologist and author of "Ancient Civilization of the Andes," says these ruins are probably those of a long boundary wall built by the ancient Chancas in their fruitless effort against the powerful Incas. He thinks it possibly dates back to the Eleventh century. Mr. Means points out that similar walls have been found in other sections of the Peruvian Andes although they have not been so large as that reported by the Shippee-Johnson bunch.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Beautiful Brioni Isles

Little as we may know in America of Yukoslavia, we should always associate with that little known land, the lovely Brioni isles. They have broken into the newspapers recently because of the death there of Karl Kuppelwieser, whose family made these islands the paradise of the Adriatic, which was sought out by royalty and by the modern notables from George Bernard Shaw to Eugene Tunney. They were malaria-infested islands when Kuppelwieser bought them 25 years ago, but today they are noted for their freedom from mosquitoes. The late Archduke Ferdinand wanted to buy them, but they were not for sale. Ask any tourist who loves the Adriatic and he will say, go to the Isles of Brioni.

Ancient Egyptian Headdress

The Horus headdress for Egyptian women came into use in the Ptolemaic times. Originally, in the earlier history of Egypt, it was customary for a king to have his statue modeled with a hawk back of him showing the protection of the god Horus. Later, Isis, the wife of the god Osiris, was sometimes shown with wings of a hawk, a sacred bird of Egypt. A large figure of the goddess would have the wings like long arms protecting a small mortal standing in front of her. As time passed this was abbreviated into a headdress worn by women of the royal family.

Cuban "Santa Claus"

The Day of the Three Kings, January 6, is the great boys' and girls' day in Cuba. That is when the presents come. It is the Three Kings bearing gifts they picture in their minds for days ahead.

The toys may not be fine. They may be only little carts made from pieces of packing box board, or doll chairs, cradles, etc. These are oddly painted.

Children come first in the Cuban family. Cuban parents will even make personal sacrifices in order that the children may have gifts and playthings.

His Comment

They were spending a holiday in Morocco.

"Think, Ernest," she said. "Supposing brigands should come now and take me from you?"

"Impossible, my dear," her husband assured her.

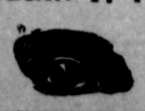

"But if they did come and carry me away, what would you say?" she insisted.

"I should say the brigands were new to the game—that's all," he replied.

Columbus

Though there has been much recent questioning as to his ancestry and birthplace, most biographers agree that he was born at Genoa, Italy, about 1451 and was the son of a woolcomber and weaver, Domenico Colombo, whose family had lived in Italy for generations. He kept a journal or diary of his voyage, the original of which has disappeared, but an abridgment of it is to be found in his biographies.

Religious Unbelief

Infidel is a term given to disbelievers in religion by those who do believe, rather than by themselves. An infidel is one who does not believe in religion, or, often, in the particular religion of those about him. An atheist is one who denies the existence of a God; while an agnostic is one who professes ignorance as to whether or not there may be a God, a future existence, etc., and who often holds that man cannot possibly prove the matter either way. The inventor of the term agnostic was Thomas Huxley.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Divisional Line

The Continental divide of North America consists of a continuous line extending north and south from the Arctic seas to the boundary between Panama and Colombia. In the United States it follows, as a rule, but not always, the most elevated portions of the Rocky mountains. Water falling east of this line flows into the Pacific. The term "Great Divide" is a popular one, but rather indefinite in meaning, and applies to a vast region in Montana, Idaho, Wyoming and Colorado traversed by the Continental divide.

Moncton Tidal Bore

The famous tidal bore, near Moncton, N. B., is the inward rush of waters up the Petitcodiac river of New Brunswick from the bay of Fundy, which has one of the highest tides in the world. The waters enter the estuary of the Petitcodiac in the form of a bore, or tidal wave, from four to six feet high. The difference between extreme high and extreme low tide at Moncton is 30 feet.

All Clear Sailing After the Fog

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

BLUE sky, blue seas, blue eyes looking into his!

"I wouldn't call the king my own cousin!" cried Forrester Knowlton, as he helped Peggy Sanford into his shining mahogany speed boat. "Where shall be go—North pole, South pole or merely the blue Canary isles?"

Pretty Peggy laughed. "Personally I'd choose the blue Canary isles, if it weren't for worrying Aunt Georgiana. As it is, how about Tamarack cove?"

"You're captain!" said Forrester, and the next moment they were off.

The two of them were members of a Murray bay house party and had been irresistibly drawn to one another from the very start, although it seemed at times as if Aunt Georgiana were contriving to keep them apart.

But now he had her to himself for a whole afternoon with the blue summer skies over them and the blue St. Lawrence stretching ahead.

Little was said until, suddenly and quite on the impulse of the moment, Forrester reached across to where Peggy sat in a cretonned wicker chair and possessed himself of her hand.

Slowly she withdrew it, a troubled look in her eyes. "Please!"

Forrester's heart sank. "I wasn't just playing, Peggy," he said hoarsely. "I—I am quite crazy about you. I want you for my wife."

Peggy lifted a pair of miserable eyes to his. "It's impossible!" she said.

"Impossible? Then you must care for someone else?"

"Oh no!" cried Peggy quickly. "That is—I mean—well, I'm engaged to Lester."

Forrester stared, unable to believe what he had heard. True, he wasn't her own cousin and yet—why, everyone, including his own family, knew what sort of a boy Lester was. Weak, unable to resist temptation of any sort.

"Peggy—" he began desperately.

But Peggy interrupted him. "Look, Forrester, is that smoke?"

Forrester looked ahead where a formless gray cloud was blotting out their view.

"Fog," he said briefly, "rolling in from the ocean." With a turn of the wheel, he swung the Starling about so sharply she showed her blades above water. "We'll have to race it home," he said.

At that instant, the engine sputtered, caught, and died. With an exclamation, Forrester sprang to the tank. Then he groaned. "Hang Lester! I let him have this boat all day yesterday and told him to be sure and fill up at the landing. Instead, he turned in the reserve and we've been running on that."

He was too concerned over his discovery to notice that Peggy's eyes had widened suddenly at the mention of Lester's name. It was important that they get out of the ticklish situation they were in. Already, cool wisps of the incoming fog were brushing their faces.

"Take the wheel and keep her headed toward that point," he directed his companion.

Reaching under the cushioned seat, he extracted a half length of oar, used in fending when the usual bumpers proved inadequate:

"We'll just about make it," he said quietly, and set to work.

After what seemed an interminable length of time but was in reality little more than a couple of hours, the bow of the Starling nosed the sandy beach that stretched at the foot of a low bluff.

"We'll find the main road not far from the river," said Forrester confidently, "and follow it to the town."

He turned to lend the girl a helping hand up the bank, and to his intense surprise, found it pressed between both of his.

"Wait, Forrester," she said shyly. "I—I think I am no longer engaged to Lester. I did it in the beginning to please Aunt Georgiana, who, after all is only a sort of step-aunt, but she has been wonderfully good to me. But Lester has deceived me. He told me yesterday he had to go to Three Rivers in the runabout—that there wouldn't be room for me. Instead—well, he took Genevieve Roberts out in your boat.

"I know I am right, for I saw Genevieve on the dock very early in the mornin and last night I overheard her te Aunt Georgiana she had been steering the Starling all day. I thought she had been with you."

The man nodded gravely. "A lot is clear to me now," he said. "Lester asked me not to mention his change of plan to his mother, nor the fact that I did her errands in Three Rivers. Yes, I feel as if I were coming out of a fog. But Peggy, this means—"

One look into the lovely blue eyes uplifted to his and he knew what it meant.

Glass Collectors Puzzled

There is no distinguishing mark by which all Sandwich glass can be identified. A little boat-shaped salt-cellar is generally accepted as the earliest of the Sandwich salts. This has the imprint "B and S Glass company" on the stern, "Sandwich" on the bottom, and "Lafayette" on each of the side wheels. If the Sandwich works had continued the practice of marking all their pieces, there would be less difficulty now about the probable source of bits of glass claimed as Sandwich. —Washington Star.

Still See Significance in Signs and Portents

Although most people in these days disclaim a belief in signs, one who watches closely will find almost every one making occasional remarks on the significance of this or that happening, most of which, sifted down, prove to be remnants of old superstitions, or folklore, of ancient days, some reaching back even to the Dark ages, when the world was commonly supposed to be peopled by various demons, whose voices were heard in the beating of the rain, the whistle of wind, rolling of thunder, and all unusual noises.

When the Evil One visited the earth he was supposed to take the form of a black cat, or a black dog. He was also credited, upon occasions, with taking the shape of a black pig on the ridgepole of a dwelling. A branch cut from a mountain ash, or a horseshoe nailed over the door, was commonly believed to keep out witches. Picking up a pin with the head toward one was supposed to insure a ride.

When the sole of the foot itched, one expected to step on strange land. When the sun shone through the limbs of apple trees on Christmas day it was claimed there would be a good crop of fruit the next year. "Plant a bean with the eye up, and it will grow straight down through the earth to China," was a common belief.—American Agriculturist.

Livingstone Worthy of Stanley's Fine Tribute

The finding of a letter written by David Livingstone in the heart of Africa is a reminder that the boys who went marching off in '61 also knew the inspiration of an adventurous hero. Seldom mentioned today, that mild Scot who entered a cotton mill at ten and the Dark continent's wastes in his twenties, was to the Civil war bugle boys what polar airmen are to their grandsons. The letter is of particular interest because it was written shortly after he discovered Lake Nyassa and contains an enthusiastic description of that "great water." His thirty years of explorations took him through a third of Africa—no other man did so much. He worked not in haste for publishers back in London, but carefully for the advance of civilization, and accordingly progressed slowly, living with the natives and noting down everything worthy of record. His were the first white man's eyes to see the Victoria falls, he sounded the slave trade's death knell, he stirred the imagination of James Gordon Bennett. In the end he left a record of accomplishment which led Stanley to write: "We look in vain among the nationalities for such a name."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Paris Claims Treasure

The city of Paris is to have an unexpected item added to the receipt side of its budget owing to a discovery made in the Bois de Boulogne last August, writes a correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph. A railway worker who was making mud pies to amuse his child unearthed a casket containing a number of gold and silver medals and 77 gold coins bearing the effigy of Louis XVI. Taking his find to a police station, he was informed that if no one claimed the treasure for a year and a day it would become his property.

But the city of Paris has now stepped in to register a claim on the coins and medals. Its case is that as the owner of the Bois de Boulogne it is entitled to a half share in anything found there.

Excursion Into Crater

After so many centuries of blighting and blasting human life, one would not expect that the old volcano outside of Naples would interest tourists. Yet that is where we can go today and right into its mouth. It will grumble and puff in spasms of rage while you enter, but that need not annoy you. It may even jerk out jets of brown steam or with muffled roars throw up beautiful gold vapors, while wicked-looking vents of hot air will lick up in flame any paper you hold to them; but, apart from the uncomfortable feeling that you are walking on ashes and molasses, breathing sulphur the while, you will return safely to the plain.

Netherlands Dykes

The dykes which protect The Netherlands from the North sea in many cases go back to Roman times. Many are raised as much as 40 feet above high-water mark and are wide enough at the top for a general roadway or canal. They are made of earth protected by stone slopes and by piles and at the more dangerous points by artificial structures of brushwood laden with stones. The West Kapelle dyke is 12,468 feet long and has a seaward slope of 300 feet. On a ridge 39 feet wide are a roadway and a railway.

One of World's Wonders

The Hanging Gardens of Babylon are said to have formed a square with an area of nearly four acres and rose in terraces, supported on masonry arches, to a height of 75 feet. They were irrigated from a reservoir built at the top, to which water was lifted from the Euphrates by a screw. Fountains and banqueting rooms were distributed throughout the numerous terraces; groves and avenues of trees, as well as parterres of flowers, diversified the scene, while the view of the city and neighborhood was extensive and magnificent.
