VEST POCKET ESSAY ON CHANGING WIVES

On those rare occasions when Mr. Public and the Scientist arrive at the same conclusion, the result is News. Recently one of the boys with a high forehead and far-away look, backed off from his test-tubes and test diets, and testily testified: "Your wife is not the girl you married!" Who, beside bachelors, didn't know that before? And again, who wants her to be! It takes time for her to learn that cigarette ashes keep moths out of the rugs and that the potted fern grows well on a cigar butt diet. Also, that strong coffee can be diluted, but that there is no hope for the weak. She learns to bear the inquisition on the first of the month when the bills flood in—even to smile when He says "I know now why 'the woman pays and pays and pays', she buys too darn much!" Such sarcasm, after she has tracked a $4.00 purchase to its $2.98 fair! She learns the difference between a reason and an alibi or more properly, an "all lie by," sprung by the smaller fraction of the unity. Also she learns tolerance. Even after he has given up dancing, has a shiny pate, acqured a silhouette like a bass viola, and falls asleep while reading the evening paper, she goes on a diet and saves up money for a permanent wave. When He boasts "I'm right in the pink of condition—just as good a man as I was 20 years ago; I can't notice a bit a difference," she agrees—with unspoken reservation. Your wife is not the girl you married—that's why you should have had a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

That member of John Public's family that raises swine and his veterinaran have both arrived at the same conclusion in regard to hog cholera: Promiscuous movement of sick hogs must be stopped. It is becoming more apparent that the occurrence of hog cholera on a man's premises is in most cases due to an error in sanitation and management. Such being the case, he should keep at home the disease he has started instead of selling sick or exposed hogs to the neighbors, the dealers, or for market. These unrestricted prartices year after year cause untold and unnecessary losses. But why confine our activities to controlling the spread of infecton Why not prevent the initial outbreak instead? The chief causes of primary outbreaks still are the feeding of infected bones, rinds and scraps of pork, the movement of sick hogs and improper use of the serum-virus treatment. All of these are within human control and cost nothing more than simple common sense care. As long as these primary causes are disregarded, the swine raisers will continue to have less Christmas cheer than they otherwise would have. More Sanitation—more Santa Claus.
