RITCHIE FOR PRESIDENT

Governor Ritchie, four times elected Governor of Maryland, announced at the annual Jackson Day dinner of the Concord Club at the Lord Baltimore Hotel Thursday evening his candidacy for President. This announcement has long been looked for by his friends and the public in general. The dinner was attended by many Democratic figures, Congressmen and members of the Democratic National Committee from other states, and his announcement was well received. Governor Ritchie is the logical candidate, he has the ability and the courage of his convictions. He has established during his terms as governor a clean and progressive government and high purposes and ideals. Nominate Ritchie and win the Presidency.

RITCHIE ENTERS RING AS PRESIDENT

Quite an enthusiastic meeting was held in Hotel Baltimore Thursday evening when Ritchie name was proposed for 1932 president by Howard Bruce. The banquet held was by no means a local affair for Democratic leaders from all parts of the country.

"So enthusiastic are they themselves these Maryland Democrats, about their handsome executive that they can not see how the remainder of the country can resist him.

Their enthusiasm was expressed in the cheers they raised for Ritchie, in the campaign slogans they coined, and in the songs they sang tonight.

"America will be safe with Ritchie," said one of the posters in the banquet hall of the Lord Baltimore Hotel.

The Ritchie boosters sang a dozen or more songs, most of them parodies on popular favorites. The meter may have been bad, but there was plenty of harmony and noise. It was a real, old-fashioned Democratic "pep" party.

Banquet Sings Songs

In all the history of Baltimore there had never been such a demand for seats at a banquet—and Baltimore is a banquet-loving town. For the occasion, Basil Sadler, a local Irving Berlin, offered a copyrighted song titled, "Let's Win With Ritchie."

It went something like this:

"A patriotic Democrat who knows
no fear,
"Let's elect him President this coming year,
"He'll give the grand old U. S. A. good times and cheer,
"So we must elect 'Al' Ritchie."

However, the song that Ritchie people sang with greatest gusto was a parody on "Maryland, My Maryland." It ran something like this:

"We have a son of stature great,
"Maryland, My Maryland,
"Whose fame has gone from State to State,
"Maryland, My Maryland;
"In '32 he'll win the race,
"As President he'll set the pace,
"Al Ritchie is our glorious ace,
"Maryland, My Maryland."

An admirer writes of him.

"King Albert."

That is what his Republican opponents called Albert Cabell Ritchie in 1930. Ritchie was running for Governor of Maryland for the fourth time—an unheard of thing. Thus the cry of King Albert, and the Republicans charged that he was trying to set up a dynasty.

When the votes were counted, however, it was seen that Ritchie had won by an overwhelming majority—70,000 or more. This was a testimonial to his magnificent record as governor of the Free State.

Ritchie is perhaps the most handsome man who ever aspired to the Presidency. He gets his good looks from his mother, who was Elizabeth Cabell, celebrated Virginia beauty. Incidentally, Ritchie was born in Richmond, Va.

Unlike most presidential aspirants, Ritchie frankly admits that he is a candidate. He has always admitted it—ever since his friends began to boom him back in 1924. When the 1932 "Ritchie-for-President" boom was launched last night in Baltimore, Ritchie said: "Of course I would like to be President. Who would not?" E. T. F.
