DEPLORES PUBLICITY TIRADE

SALISBURY LYNCHING AND PROFESSOR BROADUS MITCHELL

(BY REV. GEORGE A. MORRIS, CENTREVILLE)

I, Rev. George A. Morris, being a conservative, living in the midst of a conservative people, "on the Eastern Shore of Maryland," of sound mind, memory and understandng, do make this my first testament in the manner following, that is to say:

ITEM FIRST: All articles written (by whomsoever) "and published" concerning the Salisbury lynching, criticising and reflecting upon the intelligence, morality and spirituality of the Salisbury and Eastern Shore people, HAVE DONE NO GOOD. They have engendered strife and caused a breach that will not be easily mended. I read all the articles, judged them for what they were worth, and consigned them to the trash pile. Results of an investigation, of the "lynching at Salisbury," have recently been made public by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, hence I refer to the whole matter. We do not know all the findings but suffice it to say, in our opinion, the Federal Council might have employed its time and talent to a beter advantage than CREATING MORE STRIFF.

ITEM SECOND: When a seeming intellectual, (would that John's Hopkins had kept him at home) Prof. Broadus Mitchell was resurrected (I use the word in a sang sense,) and acts in behalf of the Federal Council's Commission on Race Relations, it is time to speak in no uncertain words. Prof. Mitchell said that he visited Salisbury from Friday to Sunday and talked to a dozen persons. Hence his conclusions. What a wonderful mind he must have. Mark you, in forty eight hours, this youngling did grasp the whole situation, weighed it in the balance and found Salisbury and the Eastern Shore people wanting, isolated and backward in mental and spiritual development. Isolated! What did he mean? Did he mean that we were isolated from such mental and spiritual intelligence as he proclaims? We thank God for the isolation. We have no quarrel with Baltimore, and do not charge that city and the Western Shore, with the outburst of vehement vituperation, from the pen of various writers. They represent a class of people who are not the brightest and best in the State in anywise. If we only knew as much as they think they know, how this old globe would whirl. If Mr. Mitchell's knowledge of political economy is as limited as is his knowledge of the people of Salisbury and the Eastern Shore, then his state or condition s worse than ours. It is zero. Yea! It is less than zero. He is a minus quantity. His picture in the newspaper, the look of the eye, indicate (to me) Egoism. O what fools we mortals be! May I insist upon what has been suggested in sarcasm by one of our critics? Well, I return it unto you. You men come over as missionaries, start a revival, have the mourners bench and stop firing putrid statements at us from a long range. Elect your officers as follows: Mitchell as chairman of the local Interracial Committee. Menchen to preach, Ainslie to pray and hang crepe on our doors. Ades to take up the collection, and the Evening Sun Editor act as janitor. Stay in our mdst as long as you please. YOU DECIDE THAT then, go to your respective places, as certain the number of penitents and how many converts you have made. If we be dead, as you claim we are spiritually leave us alone and the dead will bury their dead. However, I warn you tenderly, be cautious. O far away, far astray men! "Inflated and deluded by your own little selves, beware! Mind your own business. We have no respect for any of you. You have made matters worse by your nasty and untrue statements. We are under no obligation to any of you writers from Baltimore, who have criticised us adversely. We shall attend to our own business here on the Eastern Shore, seeking to get rid of the devil and his influence (even by piecemeal) whenever and wheresoever we can. No thanks to you wiseacres, (I use the word in contempt) or to the Federal Council of the Churches in America. I refer you to Paul's letter to the Roman's second chapter, first three verses.

ITEM THREE: Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter. Stop this hellish thing, criticising unjustly Salisbury and the Eastern Shore, lest a more grievous thing should come upon our state. Salisbury is my home town. I am proud of it, and the Eastern Shore and its people, and it is high time (all things being considered) that this damaging and damnable tirade concerning us, cease, and all the derogatory remarks and influence be consigned to Hades, where they belong.

TO PLAY ST. JOHNS TONIGHT

Washington College lost to St. Joseph College, of Philadelphia, last Saturday evening 16 to 18 in a strong defensive game that netted only five goals for both sides.

Washington led at the end of the first half 11-7. This lead was overcome in the early part of the second half when the visitors caged 4 foul shots to tie the score 11 to 11. Aside from two field goals the remainder of the game was a series of foul shots for both sides. Washington's offensive was better than the visitors but were unable to make their shots tell. FAVORS DUCKING SEASON CHANGE

DEL-MAR-VA ASSOCIATION ACTIVE—DECISION IN SPRING

Assurance from United States Senators and Congressman representing Delaware, Maryland and Virginia, as well as natonally prominent sportsmen that they will cooperate with the Del-Mar-Va Eastern Shore Association and use their influence to secure lengthening of the open season for duck and goose shooting has been received at Association headquarters.

Formal action taken at the mid-winter meeting of the Official Board of the Association resulted in Representatives of the three states in Washington being asked to cooperate in an effort to secure a change from the thirty day period ordered by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Biological Survey, last year, extending from November 16 to December 16, to a period covering practically the same number of shooting days but extended over three months with restricted shooting days each week.

Because of Del-Mar-Va bay and ocean shore lines being recongnized as a section of the finest duck and goose grounds in the United States and this naturally providing employment for a large number of men as caretakers, guides and boatmen, the curtailment of the season last year cut their employment about 66 per cent. and, according to Association officials, left many of the finest stretches of hunting ground, such as the leading clubs on Chesapeake Bay and the ocean side without the protection provided when caretakers are retained throughout the season. This was deemed by the Association as a decided lessening of protection for wildfowl.

Based on complaints from all sections of the Peninsula, not only from sportsmen but from many whose employment was affected, the Association formally entered protest and asked for an extension as outlined. They filed protest with Mr. H. A. Sheldon, Acting Chief, Bureau of Biological Survey, as well as calling upon United States Senators and Congressman representing Delaware, Maryland and Virginia Acting Chief Sheldon has acknowledged the protest giving assurance that the suggestions and opinions set forth will be given careful consideration and advising that no definite conclusion for the 1932 season can be made until the Bureau completes its investigations this Spring.

Practically without exception the Congressmen and Senators, some who had been actively interested in endeavoring to bring about a change last year, give further assurance that will exert ther influence this year.

Quite unexpectedly several of the most noted sportsmen in the country, learning of the Association's endeavor, have volunteered their cooperation to secure the change requested.

OUR BIG TREES

(BY S. E. PERKINS III)

The Forestry Department of Maryland has issued a valuable addition to the literature of the natural history of the State:—a list of largest trees of each of 119 species within the State, officially measured.

Kent County boasts two of these unusual specimens, namely:

A basket oak growing in the churchyard of famous and old St. Pauls Episcopal Church. Many others of different kinds also grace the region thereabouts almost large enough to hold a record. The basket oak is 20 feet around, has 100 feet of spread and rises 95 feet into the sky.

A wild cherry situate near Worton and owned by Mr. Henry Rasin is 15 feet and 8 inches in girth and is 60 feet tall.

In the list Talbot is shown to have the largest number with Garrett second. Each of these counties has a very different physiography and would naturally grow extremes of tree-life size.

The tree largest in circumference of any kind, and the oldest as well is the justly famous Liberty Tulip in Annapolis. Its girth is 26 feet at four and one-half feet up from the ground; it towers 124 feet toward heaven and is about 650 years old. Strange is it not, that Maryland's State Bird, originally called the Baltimore bird, now the Baltimore Oriole, should have been painted by Marh Catesby in 1731 and by John James Audubon in 1827, (both famous artists and naturalists) perched and nesting in a tulip tree!

Let's see—it was while King Edward I, of England, known as "Longshanks" was subduing Wales and Scotland in 1284 A. D. and while in the next few years his successor Edward II was losing Scotland to Bruce, that this monarch of the forest oldest living thing in all of Maryland was getting its start on the densely wooded slopes that have since become the winding streets and plotted crcles of the Capital City. This magnificient specimen was 200 and more years old before Christopher Columbus sailed the seas.

With the great number of these Baltimore Orioles to be seen the summer thru in this fair county and thruout the State, and more than that, still to be seen placing their pendent, intricately-woven nests among "My Lord's Candles" in the giant tulips common everywhere, are we not fitly favored to have a more widespread knowledge of both tree and bird among our citizens?
