PRECEPT AND EXAMPLE

The following editorial appeared in the Baltimore News, on Thursday.

Kent County grand jurors believe in wedding example to precept. This is a somewhat rare virtue in those who undertake to give advice to others.

In urging strict economy on the government of the county, the members of this body, after spending two days in investigating the public finances, generally declined to accept the stipend which the law allowed them, and thus left in the treasury a tidy little store of dollars which the county will no doubt find use for in other ways.

Kent is fortunate in having a grand jury composed of such public-spirited citizens, and the excellent publicity which the county will gain from their self-denial will probably prove more advantageous than the money saved.
