FURROWS

MR. EDITOR:

A lot of people is talkin and writin about taxes and the cost of government in this country. It looks like it is a game between the tax-gatherers and the tax-payers. As I happen to be one of the tax-payers my interest is on that side. I ain't no tax expert, but I do some thinkin along this line, and since you don't seem to mind lettin me air my views in your paper I want to offer a few suggestions.

Take the National situation, fer example. The game down in Washington seems to be to lay a tax on anything if it can be collected without too much objection from the voters. The sales tax wuz about to go through and that would have been mainly a tax on the poor. Four-fifths of it would have been paid by people that git less than a thousand dollars a year. At a time when a lot of people is strugglin to keep soul and body together such a tax would have been a terrible burden. To their everlastin credit the people back home rose up in wrath and sent a lot of letters and telegrams to their Congressmen and that settled that fer awhile anyway.

Last week Congress started usin a little sense and voted to get some of the money needed to balance the budget from the people that has it to pay. Big incomes to be taxed heavy, fer most of the government is run fer the benefit of the big income boys. We could git along in this country without so much of the luxury of bureaus and departments that spend a lot of time and money doin things that has already been done by another bureau or department. I heard a prominent man say not long ago that three departments investigated the number of pigs raised in Vermont last year and they all three got different results. I, fer one, don't see how such information is goin to help anybody in this part of the country, and I think that sort of expense could be stopped.

There is another tax that is goin to be laid on the poor that could jest as well be left off. This is the stamp tax on bank checks. It is goin to hurt the banks in the small towns and the small depositors in these banks. It will just make a lot of people pay their bills in cash and won't help anybody any. I think some more letters from back home ought to be sent down to Washington about this also.

But I am most interested in what is goin on here in Maryland. What we want is to find some way to help the tax-payers of this State. When the bridge at Havre de Grace wuz made double deck the State Government took off the toll. I wuz drivin down that road to Baltimore not long ago and I decided to count the cars from out of the State that I met. By actual count the out of state cars wuz about two to one to the Maryland cars. Now, if a toll of twenty-five cents a car wuz put on the bridge it would put a lot of money in the hands of the State Roads Commission and save a little fer the tax-payers of Maryland. That fund could be used fer that road and bridge and it would help a lot. Or course some sort of plan could be found so that the people that live in the vicinity of that bridge could have a reduced rate, or a free pass if necessary, and then the out of state people that use the bridge would have to help keep it up. The same thing could be done up the river at Conowingo and nobody would be hurt. The out of state people that use them two bridges always fill up with gasoline before they come into Maryland to save a cent a gallon on our tax. This plan would save some road taxes fer our people and at the same time keep good roads fer them people to use.

Then there is another item that I want to mention. The State is furnishin roadbeds for these trucks and busses that haul fer pay. They ought to be charged a bigger license fee than other cars and small trucks that private people use. These trucks hog the roads and pay very little fer he privilege of crowding other people off the road. It's dangerous to drive on the roads now fer the trucks is so thick and take so much of the road that small cars have to git off to pass them.

I wish you would pass these ideas on to our Governor and the State Government, for I think they would help if put into effect.

Yours truly,
JOSIAH ALLEN WEATHERBY.
