June 9 a Red Letter Day for Poultry men.

Feed Mineral Mixture With Soybeans

Soybeans are rapidly coming to prominence as a splendid source of farm raised protein for all classes of live stock. They will replace linseed oil meal in rations for poultry, dairy cattle, swine, beef cattle sheep, etc.

They are lower in mineral matter than some other protein carriers. This weakness is easily corrected by supplying a meneral supplement. A good economical mixture is simply made as follows:

10 pounds ground limestone.

10 pounds special steamed bone meal and one pound common salt.

The mixture is good with either the soybean meal from which the oil has been extracted or with the beans—whole or ground.

FIGHT MEXICAN BEAN BEETLE

The Mexican Bean Beetle will be plentiful this year due to light winter. The adults are emerging now and will be laying clusters of yellow eggs. When these eggs are hatching spray the underside of the leaves with magnesium arsenate if you use a fluid spray and have a sprayer which will throw the spray upward so as to reach the underside of the leaves.

If you have a suitable duster which will blow the dust to the underside of the leaves, the various brands of 20-20-60 copper arsenic—lime dust have been found very efficient.

Either the dust or the spray must be properly aplied to be effective. Pressure dusters or sprayers are more effective than cheap hand sprayers or dusters.

If the first generation of the Mexican Bean Beetle is well controled—trouble from the several later generations will be greatly reduced. Details from County Agent.

Fruit Men Fight Insects

If quality fruit is to be secured—close attention to spraying must be given. Coddling Moth and Curvulio prospects indicate the need for keeping the fruit covered with spray as directed on Spray Service Cards.

S. L. Crosthwaite, Extension Entomologist, is working on the Eastern Shore directing the fight against insect enemies of farm and garden.

DISCUSS TAX SITUATION

STATE COMMITTEE TO MEET SHORTLY

The Chestertown and Fairlee locals of the Kent County Farm Bureau held a joint meeting in th Court House, Chestertown, on Wednesday evening of this week.

The principal topic of discussion was the tax situation which has been discussed by the various locals in all parts of the county.

State Committee To Meet Shortly

Announcement was made today by Miles H. Fairbank, secretary of the Maryland Farm Bureau Federation, that the tax committee of the State organization will shortly meet with a similar committee representing the Maryland State Grange in order that Maryland farmers may present a united front in preparing their program which will be presented to the Maryland State Tax Survey Commission appointed by Governor Ritchie last year.

E. Thomas Massey on State Committee

This commission is formulating plans to be presented at the next session of the General Assembly and Maryland agriculture hopes to arrange a unified tax program before the Legislature meets, Secretary Fairbank said, following the first meeting, in Baltimore, of the Maryland Farm Bureau tax committee of which E. Thomas Massey of Kent county is chairman. Other members are H. H. Nuttle, Caroline county; T. S. Anderson, Frederick county; R. Smith Snader, Carroll county; Charles T. Cockey, Jr., Baltimore county; Dr. T. B. Symons, director of the University of Maryland Extension Service; President James W. Davis and Secretary Fairbank of the State body. The last three ar acting in an ex-officio capacity.

The meeting, to which Dr. S. H. DeVault and C. H. Walker of the University of Maryland were invited, was called for the purpose of analyzing the tax situation among Maryland farmers and of formulating a relief program. The tax committee of the Grange have already adopted a suggested program and the forthcoming joint conference of the two committees will, it is believed, result in a united program.

The Maryland Farm Bureau Federation has announced the appointment of Miles H. Fairbank to succeed the late Frank M. Payne as secretary-treasurer of the State body. The new executive is thirty-four years old and was born in Baltimore though he received his early training on a Queen Anne's county farm, on Kent Island, the son of Howard D. Fairbank of Stevensville. He was educated in the county public schools and since his father was a farmer he rented his first farm as a share tenant when he was twenty year sold. Prior to that he had worked for the old Maryland, Delaware and Virginia Railroad Company.

Mr. Fairbank left the farm to become editor of the Maryland Farmer and later went with the Baltimore Sun to handle agricultural advertising in the classified department. In 1922 he was appointed agricultural agent for Howard county, his lack of collegiate agricultural training being waived in view of the reputation he had made in farm organization work.

Mr. Fairbank aided in organizing one of the first of the Maryland county farm bureaus and later became director of organization and publicity of the Maryland organization. Continuing in that post for two years he returned to his work in Howard county but left the Extension Service in 1928 to become sales manager of a large corporation in Baltimore and, later, assistant to the president. The company moved to Soutr Bend, Ind., in 1931.

Mr. Fairbank was them made general manager of the corporation which position he resigned to take up his present office. He studied law in Maryland and Indiana and is a member of the Indiana Bar as well as the St. Joseph County Bar Association of that state. He is a seventh degree Granger and a Mason, is married and has two children.
