CATHERINE OF ARAGON

A most pathetic figure is Catherine of Aragon, as she is portrayed by Shakespeare in his play of Henry VIII. She was the daughter of the King of Spain and arrangements were made that she should marry Arthur, the eldest son of Henry VII, King of England. So Catherine was brought to England and was married to Arthur, a mere boy. But Arthur died the next year, and Henry, unwilling to let Catherine's possessions go back again to Spain, arranged a mariage for her with his younger son, Henry, then a boy of twelve years.

So Catherine stayed in England and married him at the death of Henry VII and became the Queen of Henry VIII. Henry, at that time, was a handsome amiable youth and everything promised well. His subjects were very fond of him and his reign began very auspiciously. But he became spoiled by the flattering of his courtiers, and began to think he must have his own way about everything. Notable among his favorites was Wolsey whom he loaded with riches and made him Archbishop of Canterbury. Catherine disliked him, and knew that he cared not for her, but her life in England was happy for a while. A girl was born to her and the King. They called her Mary and she afterwards became Queen Mary of England. Then a charming girl named Anne Boleyn became one of Catherine's maids of honor, and Henry began to tire of his Queen and look for reasons to put her away. He said he felt scruples about marrying his sistr-in-law and felt that perhaps that was the reason that his wife bore him no sons. So he consulted Wolsey and they began to persecute the Queen and urge her to consent to nullify the marriage. But Catherine refused with courage and dignity, and appealed to the Pope for justice. Wolsey, in the meantime, was trying to please the King and at the same time was afraid of the anger of the Pope. But the King, weary of the delay, set the Pope's wishes aside and divorced Catherine and married Anne.

So in the King's displeasure, Wolsey fell from his high estate and bade farewell to all of his greatness. "Had I but served my God with half the zeal I served my King, he would not have left me in my age to my enemies" he said to his friend.

Queen Catherine did not leave England but lived in Kimgolton Castle, closely guarded, and refused every design of the King and his agents to sign away her rights and those of her daughter Mary.

Catherine's character was noble and her disposition sweet and gentle. She endured her bitter and undeserved misfortune with great womanly forbearance and she showed her forgiving nature in her great compassion for her fallen enemy. She died in 1536, not before the fickle King had begun to tire of his second wife, Anne.

Mrs. Rosevelt, the wife of the Democratic nominee, is a most capable and interesting woman. She not only presides with grace over the Executive Mansion as hostess, but teaches school and conducts a factory for the unemployed.

She promises to be a most efficient "First Lady of the Land" if her husband is elected president.

THE TREND OF FASHION

Black and White

The black coat with the white frock bids fair to be a popular notion. A black coat, half satin and half wool, is worn over a white wool crepe dress for afternoon and the theatre. It is a Hollywood fashion.

Dark Chiffon for Evening

Another idea which Paris has for evening gowns is the clear, dark shade in chiffon. For example, a formal chiffon dress in midnight blue—worn with diamonds or pearls—or in bfown or dark red. Some of the Chiffons have elaborate shirrings on the bodice and a butterfly bow at the back of the waistline.

For The Camper

For the camper, too, there are delightful faashions. The dignified woman, not accustomed to chorts and knickers, will be glad to learn of a smart divided skirt of cotton covert that amply covers the knees and hands in well-balanced lines. Cotton covert shorts for slim young things are serviceable. The real knicker suit combines the virtues of both divided skirt and shorts and is more universally usual. One in cotton gabardine is shown to be very attractive. To wear with it one wants the simplest of boyish shirts, one of those made of broadcloth and with breast pockets.

For Golf

For golf the classic heavy linen skirt that buttons down the front is always good. In the illustration a very chic skirt—chic largely because of its appropriateness—is shown with a skirt of this type. It is of pale green homespun silk. Next to it is sketched a candy-striped sudanette dress (sports dresses and candy stripes are almost as synonymous as small boys and lollypops this summer'. The dress speaks for itself; it is good looking because of the amusing way the stripes are handled.

RECIPES

Pastry

2 cupfuls flour
1 cupful shortening
½ teaspoon salt
Ice water

Sift flour and salt together and blend with shortening, using two knives, until thoroughly mixed. Add enough ice water to handle. Toss on boured board. Roll very thin and cut into squares.

Duck Rissole

1 1-3 cupfuls duck meat—cooked
1 cupful thick white sauce
Dash cayenne pepper

Mix duck thoroughly with white sauce, remove from fire and let cool. Roll pastry on a slightly floured board until very thin. Cut into 4-inch squares and place 1½ tablespoonfuls of creamed duck on each. Fold pastry into envelope shape. Wet edges and pinch together. Brush with beaten egg yolk and bake twenty minutes or until crust is done.

Banana Pie

Beat two eggs with three-quarter cupful of sugar. Add one tablespoonful of cornstarch, a pinch of salt and two tablespoonfuls of flour. Beat well and add one pint of scalded milk, cook for two or three minutes and add one teaspoonful of vanilla. Have a bottom crust already baked and filled with sliced bananas. Over them pour the hot custard. Allow it to cool and add meringue.

Fresh Pineapple Pie

1 medium sized pineapple, cut in small pieces
2 cupfuls sugar
2 eggs
2 teaspoonfuls flour
1 cup cold water

Cook above ingredients for about ten minutes and bake in single cruct with a meringue or between two vrusts.

Darn Clever, These Japanese.

The Japanese are funny folks—
They fight another nation,
And then erplain it as an act
Of more pacification.
They rake and shell another State
And violate each pact,
Announcing that it's nothing but
A very friendly act!

Here Is Simple Way to Avoid Nervous Trouble

In one of his addresses, Dr. Charles H. Mayo said: "Every other hospital bed in the United States is for mentally afflicted, insane, idiotic, feebleminded or senile persons. That's worry. It is worry that breaks down the brain, not work as such."

In this connection we are reminded of the prescription which a physician gave to a highly nervous patient whose life was made miserable by a constant procession of fears and forebodings. The physician sealed the prescription in an envelope, told the patient to take it home, to treat it confidentially, but to use it freely in as large doses as was necessary. This magic seven-word prescription which has worked wonders with many people read: "The things you fear most never happen."—From How to Live.

On an Equality

When the famous Doctor Johnson courted Mrs. Porter, whom he afterward married, he told her that he was of mean extraction; that he had no money; and that he had had an uncle who was hanged! The good lady by way of reducing herself to an equality with the doctor, replied, that she had no more money than he, and that, although she had had no relation hanged, she had fifty who deserved hanging!

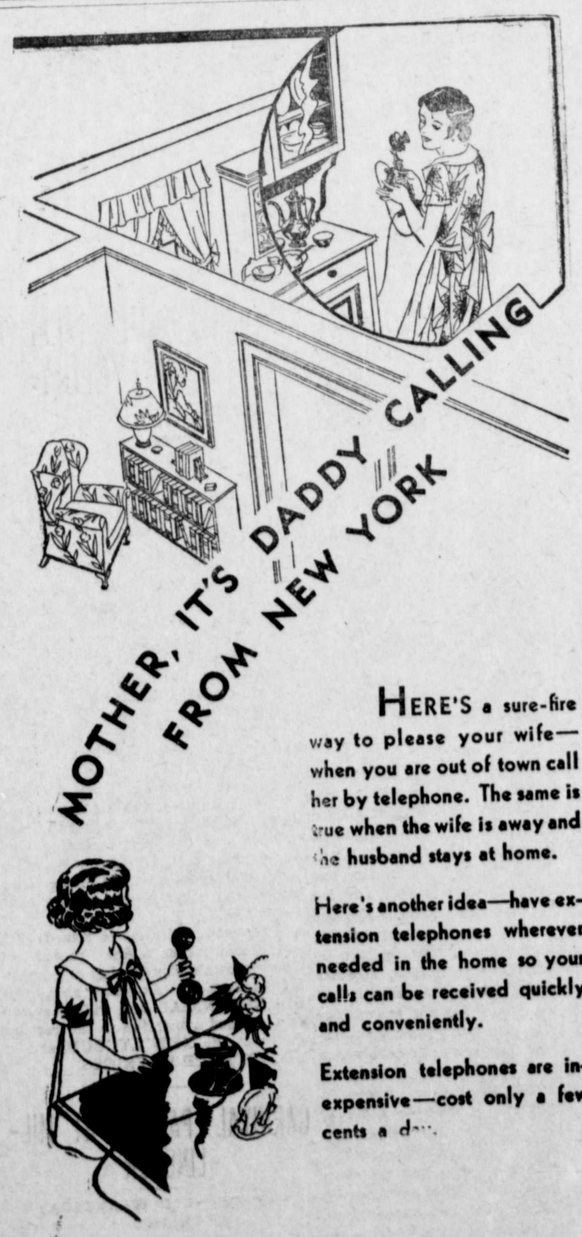

Values

Never underestimate your own ability, providing of course that you have made yourself really able in some line of endeavor. Most persons take you at your own estimate, so it won't pay to belittle accomplishments you have acquired.—Grit.
