WILLIAM S. COLLINS

Just suppose you were lined with money. What would you do with it all. Many of us, no doubt have day-dreams, as to how we would spend our millions, IF we had them. Naturally most of us would first fix ourselves up with every comfort. After that no doubt we would get public spirited; building roads, school-houses, hospitals, disposal plants, pavements, curbs and gutters, sewers, water-mains, public buildings, bridges and othr articles too numerous to mention which are always found in a well-equipped community. Do you think all this would be appreciated by those you benefitted?

You probably remember that before de big "woe," our roads with Delaware land were crowded with Delaware cars. When a Delawarian wanted to take a tour, he headed for good roads and came over to Maryland. Our high crowned, narrow strips of macadem, were really appreciated in those days. A trip into Delaware meant riding on dust covered cow paths. What little improved high-way they had was in bad condition. The state as a whole had a very backward appearance when compared to Maryland.

During the world war, a man named du Pont made more money than he knew what to do with. The public spirit bug stung him and he started fixing up the state of Delaware. (Why "he" should be used when speaking du Pont, I really don't know. There are several du Ponts and several of them have been donators to the state of Delaware. Most every one however uses du Pont in the singular as if there were only one.)

A ride through the Blue Hen state today, takes you over an unexcelled high-way system. Large up-to-date school buildings are in every town and seen improved a hundred per cent. Donations out of the du Pont's pocket started this march of progress. (However, I remember hearing a debate on the prohibition question. The debate took place at a student meeting in Baltimore, shortly after the war. The debater extolling the virtues of prohibition said, "We will take just one state alone and show how we are progressing since the prohibition law was passed. The state of Delaware has built —— miles of road. ——dollars have been spent for schools.)

For an example:

Two or three weeks ago, on a drive home from Ocean City, Md., I was coming up the du Pont Boulevard. While stopped at a traffic light, I was asked for a ride by a young fellow with a satchel. The young fellow met my approval so I gave him a lift. He was on his way to business school in Wilmington. A very pleasant young man until I asked him if du Pont had donated the money for beautifying the roadside. Then the fireworks started.

According to this young man du Pont had donated nothing. For every dollar du Pont had given the state he had taken back two by robbing the state of taxes. The assessments on du Pont properties were low and in this way du Pont was robbing the state. Mr. du Pont was very dictatorial about what he had charge of and the people hated him.

After the young man got out, I realized more than ever, that donations are seldom appreciated.

A popular man is one that does not get too public spirited. Take a look around and you will find that the people that do most for a community are seldom appreciated.

HEALTHMOBILE TO VISIT KENT

TO SPEND WEEK HERE AUGUST 5TH TO 24TH

WORK TO BE CONFINED TO CHILDREN

Over sixty places in Southern Maryland and on the Eastern Shore will be visited during the summer by the Healthmobile of the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health, and child health conferences will be held at each place. The "Health Bus" started out last week, making its first stops in St. Mary's County. The provisional schedule for the rest of the season is as follows:

St. Mary's County, until July 15.
Charles County, July 18 to 29.
Calvert County, August 1 to 12.
Kent County, August 15 to 24.
Queen Anne's County, last week in August.
Somerset County, September 6 to 15.

The arrangements at each place are being made by the County Health Officer and the Public Health Nurse. The staff of the "special" includes a doctor who has had special training in the care of babies and young children, and a dentist. It is fitted up with everything needed for a complete physical examination of babies and young children, including a dental chair and the rest of the appliances necessary for examining and caring for children's teeth.

The big car is clearly marked as coming from the State Department of Health so that it can be easily recognized as it comes along the road. It is usually parked near a school building or church, or some other readily accessible place, and within a short time, everything is in readiness for te examinations. A movie outfit is included in the equipment and health movies are shown in the evenings.

The aim of these conferences is to show mothers how to keep their children well. No medical treatments are given. Children in need of medical care are referred to their own doctors.

Last year over 2,000 children were brought to the conferences held in connection with the visits of the healtmobile to the same counties, and over 1,100 were given dental care. The conferences afford a special opportunity for mothers to have their children who will reach school age this summer, examined and the necessary corrections attended to, before the children start to school.

ATTACKED BY BLACK SNAKE

Vigorously refuting the theory that black-snakes are comparatively harmless, a mammoth reptile of this species last Friday attacked Louise Walls, 10-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Walls, of near Ingleside, and inflicted two painful tusk wounds on the child's leg.

The child was walking through a hay field near where her father and farm laborers were working, when suddenly they were attracted by her screams. It is supposed that she stepped either upon the snake or so near it that the reptile launched immediate attack. Before help could arrive the snake had bitten her twice on the leg.

The reptile, which measured six feet in length, was promptly killed. Fearful that the bites might prove poisonous the little girl was immediately given medical attention, but no unfavorable developments have occurred.
