SCHOOL DAYS — By DWIG

Dandelion Jim

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) (WNU Service)

IT WAS a decided shock for Cornelia Meade when she arrived at the little red prairie station where she had expected her uncle or one of the family to meet her, to find a perfectly strange young man in cowboy clothing and a broad hat in his hand, bowing before her.

"Miss Meade?" he asked pleasantly, and when she bowed he added, "Mr. Fisher was very sorry that he could not come himself but his bad knee has bothered him today and he thought it best to keep it very quiet. Excuse me, please, but I must see to your baggage—if you will give me your checks—thank you."

"Who does he remind me of?" asked Cornelia, and, finding no answer, flushed a little at her odd interest in this cowboy attached to her uncle's ranch. Cornelia Meade rather prided herself on her aloof attitude toward young men—she was simply indifferent to everyone of them. Sometimes her thoughts did steal away from her stern keeping and she would remember one summer when they stayed at a farm and she had met a boy—a farmer's lad several years older than herself, who had been the most charming playmate a small girl could have. There were other children but none of them had the charm that young "Dandelion Jim," as they called him, possessed. Cornelia had never seen him or heard of him again.

"Ready, Miss Meade?" asked the young man's cheery voice, and she turned to find a large motor car in the back of which were her trunks.

He knew how to drive and it was only a half hour's stiff ride, fleeing like the wind itself, with no fear of traffic officer, before they entered the wide gates of a comfortable ranch house, with Uncle Paul and Aunt Kathie waving from the broad veranda. She was warmly greeted and then they explained that both the children happened to be away from home for a few days.

"They did not expect you quite so soon, dear, and they will be so disappointed," said Aunt Kathie, "but they will be home at once. As soon as we received your telegram, I telephoned to Kathie and she will be here this evening. Dick and a friend will arrive on the morning train. Paul, did you introduce Jim to Cornelia?—Jim," she called to Cornelia's driver.

"Yes, Mrs. Fisher," he said smiling, and Aunt Kathie said, "Cornelia, this is one of our best friends. Jimmy Lyon, foreman of the Bar-B ranch!"

As Cornelia dressed after her cold bath a week later she thought of the week at the ranch, and her thorough enjoyment of all the sports of that outdoor land. She had written her mother that she would forego the trip to Europe this year that her sister and parents were taking, if she might only remain out here with her uncle and aunt.

They were a merry crowd with Dick and Kathie home and Dick's classmate, Jack Hart. The[re] was to be a dance that evening [at] a nearby ranch, and they were all going, even Jim Lyon confessed that [he] had considered it. To tell the truth, this announcement made Cornelia very happy, for she was growing to like Jim Lyon more than she would have cared to confess. Little by little she had extracted information from the family—Jim Lyon was really from the East—and he was like one of the family, this extremely good-looking young man, whom all the cowboys called "Dandy," and whom Cornelia had found looking at her from wistful blue eyes when he thought she was not glancing in his direction.

When they came home together after the dance, Mr. Fisher winked at his wife and murmured: "Wonder what Cornelia's mother would think if the girl married our ranch foreman?"

Aunt Kathie laughed comfortably. "If she knew what we know, Paul, she wouldn't say a word—how could she? Here's Jim—as rich and well educated as any of them, working for us summers because he likes the life—I suppose, though, if he should marry Cornelia, if she would have him, I mean, he would not come back here very often."

"Perhaps they would both come back," said her husband sagely.

And the very next day it happened. Cornelia and Jim, riding toward Sweet Springs, dismounted there and rested in the shady spot.

"Please tell me your whole name, Jim," said Cornelia suddenly.

Jim Lyon looked at her with eager blue eyes. "My name is Daniel Donald Lyon, named for two uncles—my nickname has always been Dan D. Lyon!"

"I wish it was Dandelion Jim," smiled Cornelia.

"Why? Why? Who told you that it used to be that out on Sammis' farm in New Hampshire. And you are the little Cornflower girl—remember? I used to call you that?"

"I remember—I remember—"

"And do you remember the old yellow horse with the white nose—"

"Old Sorrel? And how I tried to ride him and slipped off of his drooping back? And you caught me—and saved me!" Cornelia's eyes were shining with happy tears.

"And you wore a little blue gingham dress—like an apron!"

"You remember that?"

"I remember everything—down all the years—" and then Cornelia was in Dandelion Jim's arms.

Petrarch in Literature

Petrarch lived in the Fourteenth century in the early days of the Italian Renaissance, and is remembered for the sonnets which he wrote in Italian and for his influence in reviving interest in classical antiquity. To the men of the Middle ages this life seemed important chiefly as a preliminary period of trial before the day of judgment, and man's chief concern here was supposedly seeking salvation. Petrarch shared the intellectual curiosity and the delight in being alive that was common in the writers of Greece and Rome. Interest in this present life came to be a prominent characteristic of the Renaissance and of the generations since. It is because of his departure from the medieval ideals that Petrarch is now thought of as modern.

Last Civil War Battle

Saylors Creek was the last great battle of the Civil war. General Sheridan described it as "one of the severest conflicts of the war." It is explained that comparatively little is heard of the battle because it was completely overshadowed by the surrender of the Confederacy only three days later. Such leading generals as Lee, Meade, Longstreet, Sheridan, Humphreys, B. H. Anderson, Ewell, Gordon, Seymour, Crook, Merritt, Stagg, and Kershaw were engaged. The battle took place on April 5, 1865. The scene was the general neighborhood of Amelia courthouse, about 30 miles west of Petersburg, Va.
