SCHOOL DAYS — By DWIG

HUNTING SEASON OPENS NEXT THURSDAY

MAY SHOOT RAILBIRDS AND DOVE SEPTEMBER 1ST

SQUIRREL SEASON OPENS SEPTEMBER 15

The fall hunting season will start next Thursday, September 1st when the season opens for railbirds and doves. This is the season for shooting greater and lesser yellowlegs but Federal regulations closes the season on these there species of birds indefinitely.

The dove season is from September 1st to September 30th. The season then closes until November 15th when it is opened again until December 15th. The bay limit is 18 per day.

The open for shooting squirrels is from September 15th to October 15th, inclusive; then closed until November 15th when the season opens again until December 24th. The bag limit is 10 squirrels per day.

The season for rabbits and quail is November 15th to December 31st, inclusive.

The season for jacksnipe is November 1st to January 15th, inclusive; however Federal regulations provides that no person shall hunt jacksnipe until 12 o'clock noon on opening day.

WATERFOWL

Season November 16th to January 15th

The season for waterfwl has been extended this year from November 16th to January 15th.

The new open season for ducks, geese, brant and coot in the various parts of the United States are as follows:

In Me., N. H., Vt., Mass., R. I., Conn., N. Y., (except Lond Island), W. Va., Ohio, Ind., Ill., Mo., Kans., Okla., N. Mex., Ariz., Ida., Ore., and Wash.—October 16 to December 16;

In Mich., Wiis., Minn., Iowa, Nebr., S. D., N. D., Mont., Wyo., Colo., Utah, and Nev.—Oct. 1 to Nov. 30;

On Long Island and in N. J., Pa., Del., Ken., Calif., and in western and northern Tex.—Nov. 1 to Dec. 31;

In southern and eastern Tex. and in La., Ark., Miss., Tenn., Ala., Ga., S. C., N. C., Va., and Md.—Nov. 16 to Jan. 16;

In Florida—November 20 to January 15; and In Alaska—September 1 to October 31.

On ducks the daily bay limit remains at 15 for all species, of which number not more than five may be eider ducks and not more than 10 of each or in the aggregate may be canvasbacks, redheads, greater or esser scaups, ringnecks, blue-winged teal, green-winged teal, cinnamon teal, gadwalls, or shovellers. This additional protection has been given to these species, explained the Biological Survey Chief, because they did not recover from the effects of the drought that prevailed for several years past on their breeding grounds to the same degree as other species. This drought, together with the effects of heavy shooting and the loss of marsh areas by drainage and other causes, had reduced their numbers materially. Mallards, blackducks, geese, brant, and some other species were not so seriously affected by these factors, he said, because the greater part of their breeding grounds in the United States and Canada are not so closely limited to the regions that have been affected by the drought.

The possession limit on all species of ducks and geese is double the daily bag limit. To two other species of duck—the ruddy and buffle-head—the protection of a continuous closed season has been given. This was made necessary by an unusually serious diminution in their numbers.

The bag limit on mourning doves was reduced from 25 to 18 a day.

The new regulations provide an open season of two weeks on band-tailed pigeons in California, Arizona, New Mexico, Washington, and Oregon, with a bag limit of 10 a day and a possession limit of the same number. The band-tailed pigeon is a western gamebird and has increased greatly in the past few years under the protection of a closed season. These birds have now reached the point in numbers where they do considerable damage to the fruit crops of these five western states.

The number of live-duck decoys that can be legally used anywhere in the United States is limited to 25. The use of live-goose decoys, permitted elsewhere, is prohibited in California because of local conditions.

The Department of Agriculture was gravely concerned over the condition of many of the pricipal game species of wild ducks in 1931. Officials of the Survey recall that the disastrous drought prevailing for several years in the prairie provinces of Canada and in parts of the northwestern states resulted in such a lack of water on the principal breeding grounds of waterfowl in these regions that the 1931 hatch of the birds was far below normal. To meet the emergency, the Secretary of Agriculture, with the approval of the President, shortened the open season in 1931 to one month throughout the United States.

Investigators of the Biological Survey, who have continued their observations throughout the winter and spring, report that the short season of 1931 was successful in averting what otherwise might have been an irremediable disaster. The reduction of shooting during the fall and winter of 1931 enabled a good supply of mature birds to return to their breeding grounds this spring. In addition to this, investiators o the Survey who are now in those regions report a considerable improvement in water conditions. Marshes, lakes, and sloughs that have been entirely dry for several seasons past, they state, are rapidly filling with the resumption of normal rainfall over the area. Many species of ducks, however, are still below normal abundance.

Officials of the Biological Survey state that, all factors considered, the improvements noted have been sufficient to warrant a two-months season this year, especially as protection through lowered bag limit has been given to the species most seriously affected by the bad conditions of the past few years. The results of the 1932 season will be observed closely, however, to prevent if possible a repetition of the conditions that brought on the emergency situation of the previous year.
