"Immortal Will" Called Most Quoted of Poets

If one told you that you are quite apt to quote Shakespeare almost any day in the week, it would strike you as unlikely, says a writer in the Literary Digest.

The Atlanta Journal brings up a list of common sayings, whose source, you might say, was anywhere but in Shakespeare's plays. This paper is of the opinion that he is the most quoted of all poets.

"For instance: Dead as a doornail, eaten out of house and home, as good luck would have it, mad as a March hare, a snake in the grass, A woman will not tell what she does not know, birds of a feather, Care killed a cat, Cake is dough, Every dog has his day, Fast bind, fast find, Every man to his trade, Familiarity breeds contempt, Good wine needs no bush, Make hay while the sun shines, Past cure, past care, pitchers have ears, poor and proud, sink or swim, speak by the card, the world on wheels, We burn daylight, Woo in haste and wed at leasure, Give the devil his due, and What the dickens!

"Moreover, Shakespeare has been quoted since the groundlings and the gods first delighted in his plays above 300 years ago, and probably will be quoted as frequently as ever 300 years hence."

LINDA DEERING knew perfectly well that young man kneeling beside the Siberian iris was no gardener. He was Mrs. Damon's nephew, who she had heard her Aunt Lily say was handsome as a Greek god. Strange, in all her visits to Middle valley, that this was the only time their visits had coincided; and of course it would happen when Aunt Lily and Mrs. Damon weren't on speaking terms.

Linda glided back and forth in the new hammock, pretending to read. "He's handsomer than any old Greek god," she was thinking. "And the only attractive man I've seen in the valley!" What right had neighbors to quarrel over a paltry boundary line? She ought, out of loyalty, she supposed, carry on the feud. Well, even that might be an opening.

"What right have you digging up my aunt's iris?" she demanded. And then before he could reply, "Tell your mistress that iris does not belong to her."

"My mistress!" Matthew Damon grinned, settling back on his heels and appraising the intruder. "So you think I work here. Well, I do, it appears. Aunt Sara finds plenty of odd jobs for me. But as for the iris, why don't you go tell your mistress to make her old iris stay on her side of the line?"

"My mistress!" Linda flushed scarlet. "You needn't think I think you think I'm a hired girl! You know perfectly well who I am."

"Sure I do. You're Linda Deering, spitfire niece of a spitfire aunt."

"Why you! Why you! It wasn't Aunt Lily who began this fight. It was your own busybody aunt, tearing up Aunt Lily's beautiful iris!"

"Just as I'm doing now," he said coolly trowling under an enormous clump.

Linda ran for the house. A moment and she was back, trowel and watering pot in hand. "Every plant you've torn up goes back," she announced firmly, and proceeded to carry out her threat. Furiously she transplanted what he furiously uprooted.

Challenging eyes met challenging eyes, blue to black. The black ones, Linda saw, were laughing at her. "I've heard of folks who couldn't make their eyes behave, but you folks can't even make your garden iris behave. See that that crooked row you're sticking in my aunt's lawn doesn't run all over the place."

"Oh, dear! It is crooked, isn't it?" Linda mopped her brow with a soil-streaked palm. "Whew! this is hot work."

"I've had about enough of it myself. What say we quit and take a cool spin? Meet me round the corner in ten minutes, so our aunts won't see."

Blue eyes smiled at black. "Okay," whispered Linda.

Middle valley wasn't going to be so deadly dull after all, Linda decided. Only she and Matt would have to be careful. If his aunt ever found out—well, the old cat might disinherit him. Nor did she wish to curry disfavor with Aunt Lily.

Accordingly, Matt and Linda insulted each other openly over the long row of Siberian iris between the two places, which extended, day by day, even down the back yard, too—Matt digging it up, Linda planting it back. This could not go on forever, but it served for many a date during the next two weeks. They drove Matt's roadster to a nearby pond and went swimming together, sunning themselves on a sandy strip of beach. Already they had reached the point where each knew the other was beloved.

"H'mph!" grunted Aunt Lily, surveying the iris border with satisfaction, the next morning. "Reckon Sara Damon'll know when she's licked. She and that upstart nephew of hers."

Linda blushed guiltily. "Oh, Matt isn't so bad."

"Matt! Got to calling him Matt, have you? H'mph!"

That afternoon Matt Damon's car took the mountain road. "Linda, see how peaceful it looks down in the valley."

"I think it's lovely, Matt. And to think our own aunts hate each other! I just can't go on pretending to hate you, Matt. I'm going to tell Aunt Lily—"

"What, Linda? That you love me and I love you? That we intend to get married this fall, and they can keep their old money and iris and feud?"

Well, back they went, striking while the iron was hot, first Aunt Lily and then Aunt Sara. Then they took the pond road for a nice cool swim. Both aunts had been too stunned with the suddenness of the news to do more than gasp. The love birds flew out before they could say a word

Behind her ruffled curtain Lily Deering watched them drive away. She took the huge bouquet of iris from the center of the dining table and trotted across to her neighbor's back door.

"Ain't they beautiful! Thanks, Lily; I've missed it so. Say, you've heard the news?" beamed Mrs. Damon.

"Just now. That's why I run in. Ain't it just wonderful, Sara—the finest boy in the world getting the finest girl!"

"Grand. You were right, Lily. It worked fine. All young folks need to bring them together is plenty of opposition."
