MANY ATTRACTIONS AT CARNIVAL

DOUBLE PROGRAM FRIDAY NIGHT

Although receipts from the Chestertown Community Festival for the benefit of the fire company are short of previus years every effort is being made to entertain those who are attending the carnival.

The special atttractions have been a parade by the local company and bnd on opening night. Tuesday night the North East American Legion put on a very attractive demonstration with their drum and bugle corps. Wednesday night a comic parade was held, the prize winner being: individual, little Weisel boy; group, Francis Baker, Robert Wright and John Bibbs.

Thursday night was firemen's night and the parade included nine fire companies and six bands of music. The Millington Fire Company engine broke down just outside of town and was unable to get in the parade. The prize winners were Middletown, best band; Easton, most men in line, Sudlersville, best appearance, and Milton, longest distance. A special prize was given to the girls band of the Milton fire company.

A double attraction was planned for Friday night when the Cambridge drum and bugle corps of the American Legion will stage a demonstration and the Chestertown elementary school band will give a concert.

NOW AND THEN

ROAD TO WASHINGTON

Hills and valleys on either side,
Green, deep green, reaching far and wide,
Blue, blue sky and white, white cloud—
Did I hear somewhere of a bickering crowd?
A long, smooth road stretches on ahead—
And are there children somewhere crying for bread?
On, straight on to Washington—
Is the world quite ended—or just begun?
A church in a churchyard meek and small,
A lane leads up to a pillared hall,
A tourist camp on the edge of a wood—
Are there bodies and souls in need of food?
A new-plowed field so richly brown,
A little, homely country town,
A meadow lying lush and fair—
Did some one say there is want and care?
Do haggard men seek work in vain
While gardens bloom in sun and rain?
What can we do? What have we done?
The sign posts point to Washington.

Pollie Westcott Branham.

The above poem found in the Baltimore Sun under the Caption of the Spill Way, and as it was from the pen of a former Chestertown girl. I have put it in the collection of Now and Then. Mrs. Branham has written quite a number of poems, one published in Good Housekeeping some time ago.

It is very refreshing to know that there is on hand action to save the trees.

So many maples are dying with disease, and those, who cannot make a tree can certainly do a great deal to save its life. As Joyce Kildare says in her poem on a tree. "Poems are made by fools like me; But only God can make a tree."

"The woods were God's first temples" says Bryant, the poet, and I never enter a cathedral and look up at the fretted ceiling that it does not reminds me of great trees their tops meeting together in a great arch.

I am sure the maker of trees must look with sorrow on the ruthless destruction of these conservers of nature, drawing needed rain from the clouds, preventing by their network of roots, disastrious floods, and ever ready to shade the people from the burning rays of the sun.

The school bell is ringing again. There is somthing cheering about the sound, "Come to work," "Come to Work," Little tots who just a short time ago were todaling babies are seen looking so important with their book bags, hanging on their arms, tramping up the street. And the sound of the bell is a call to all, "Strive, and do your best." It is a mighty help for doing away with depression.

The Carnival is on. When asked how they are doing, they say, "Not so good." It is hard work for the firemen too. It would be so much better if every property holder would mail the Fire Co. a check. It certainly deserves all the help that the citizens can give; for fire engines and other equipment have to be renewed from time to time and the organization is purely a voluntary one. And in so doing, the firemen would not have to go to all the trouble of having a carnival for the purpose of raising funds.

So Sir Gilbert Parker is dead. He was a fine British parliamentarian and patriot, but most people know him through his books and the characters which he created. "The Seats of the Mighty; The Turn of the Road; The Weavers and many others are impressed upon the readers memory. They are highly interesting and instructive as well.

OYSTER SEASON ON

A LARGE NUMBER RECEIVED LICENSES LAST YEAR

Kent County to-date has issued sixty-nine oyster licenses for this season. Many tongers are already at work in the river although many of them are from Queen Annes.

Last year Kent County issued between four and five hundred licenses, which was more than usual. This was thought to be due to the abolishment of purse netting which left these people without work and with unemployment generally.

In Talbot County only seven have taken out oyster license. Talbot values its water industries and campares it with last year as follows:

Only seven oystermen ad purchased license from the office of Thomas J. Faulkner, County Clerk when the 1932-33 season opened this morning.

Very few oystermen took out license the first part of September last year, county records reveal, although before the season closed 676 persons had paid into the Clerk a total of $3,380.

Besides the revenue from tongers Talbot, last year, took in $544 from license issued to 272 crabbers. This year only 131 persons have taken out crabbers license so far.

The revenue received by the county directly from its oyster industry also is quite an item, the gross value of boats and other equipment used in Talbot being valued at approximately $100,000.

The number of persons engaged in water pursuits in Talbot last year ekceeded the number for any year during the past decade, county records reveal. This it, is believed is due to the unemployment condition generally causing more persons to take up oystering than formerly.

DROUTH ON WESTERN SHORE

FARMERS HAULING WATER FOR STOCK

Prince Georges County and Montgomery County are again victims of the drought.

Thus far into the season things are beginning to appear what they were in the summer of 1930, which is remembered by everyone, and will be fore some time. The Washington Suburban Sanitary District is again receiving water from two places in the District of Columbia. In many sections farmers are hauling water for their live stock. Streams are running dry and the crops are burning up.

Precipitation during August has been less than one third of normal. Rainfall during the current month has been barely half that enjoyed during July, which was subnormal.

Faced with a diminishing water supply in its Burnt Mills Reservoir, the Sanitary Commission, which serves the metropolitan area of both Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties, has found it necessary to draw water from District mains at Chevy Chase and Mount Rainier.

Late corn is the hardest hit by the lack of rain, according to County Agent W. B. Posey. Tobacco is also suffering.

With most streams already dry, farmers have recently been forced to haul water for their live stock.

GO TO CHURCH SUNDAY

OCTOBER 2ND IS SET FOR COUNTY WIDE ENDEAVOR

City-wide and Town-wide "Go To Church Sundays" have been popular for a number of years but a move has been made to organize a county-wide "Go To Church Sunday" for October 2nd.

An effort will be made to interest the preachers and congregations of all denominations in the county in this move with the idea of having a record attendance in all churches that day.

UNCOVERS BIG MOONSHINE PLANT

LOCATED NEAR WYE MILLS

THE PROPRIETOR IN DENTON JAIL

Alonzo G. Puckett, of Pondtown, Queen Anne's county, is in Denton Jail, awaiting a hearing before U. S. Commissioner J. DeWeese Carter of operating one of the most gigantic rum plants uncovered by Federal operatorg on the Eastern Shore in many months.

The illicit moonshine plant was discovered by Agent I. W. Windsor and deputies, working in conjunction with Sheriff Haymond Carroll in Hardcastle woods, Landing Neck, Talbot county, near Wye Mills.

1—A one-thousand gallon still modernly equipped in every detail and capable of a monthly production of thousands of gallons of raw, illicit booze.

2—Four thousand gallons whisky mash, cleverly blended and made up ready to be run through the giant still and manufactured into popular moonshine brands.

3—One 20-horse power steam boiler, ingeniously connected with the distill to insure speed in the manufacture of fire water for quick delivery to thirsty persons.

4—Twenty-four hundred pounds of sugar, carefully stored at convenient spots in the moonshine plant, to be used in mixing the ingredients for the booze supply.

5—Six hundred pounds of rye meal, ground especially for use in the mash which moonshiners mix, preparatory to sending it into the giant distill kettles.

6—Six 300-gallon mash boxes, 3 200-gallon mash boxes, 8 500-gallon mash boxes, capable of storing 6,400 gallons of mash while awaiting word to send it through the coils.

7—Two automobiles, which are being held by the authorities and concerning which no identification information will be disclosed until further investigation has been made.

Agents are a unit in describing the big moonshine plant as one of the most gigantic illicit operations uncovered in many moons.

While Puckett was arrested and is being held in Denton Jail because of his inability to provide $3,000 bail, Federal operatives do not hestitate to express doubt that he is the real owner and operator of the plant.

They rather are of the opinion that he is the "fall guy," who was planted near the outfit to take the "rap" for the real owners in the event the outfit was ever discovered.

CAMBRIDGE PETITIONS FOR CHOPTANK BRIDGE

The Cambridge Chamber of Commerce has petitioned Governor Ritchie to include in his next budget a sum to build a bridge across the Choptank river and thus save to Cambridge about twelve miles of travel to get to Baltimore and points on the Western Shore and points north. Several surveys have been made of the river for bridge building purposes. It is known that at the point the bridge is desired the river bottom is sandy and that there is less depths of water. It is understood the bridge can be built for one half what the Nanticoke river bridge cost and that there will not be the long and expensive marshy approaches. The State Roads Commission has made a survey, it is said, and find no unusual difficulties in building the Choptank span. The saving to all of Dorchester in traveling to Baltimore will be very considerable and well worth the expenditure on the part of the state.
