OLD CHESTERTOWN (Continued)

Right across from the Pearce lot was the Abbey, though at that time it was called the Pearce House. It was as now, a beautiful old home. Judge Pearce and his wife lived there although the house was kept by old Mrs. Pearce and her daughter, Miss Minnie Pearce who lived with her mother. There was another family there, too, that was well known to all the young people around and that was Mrs. Crisfield and her three children, Pearce, Ethe and Jack.

How the youth used to gather in Mrs. Crisfield's room, and listen to her wonderful stories. The stairway of the old house had two long flights of stairs meeting at the top and they were often used as seats for the audience when plays or entertainments were staged in the large hall. The Greate Room, the wainscotting of which was recently sold to the Baltimore Museum, was then used as a library and a very inviting room it was in those days. Loading out from the hall was the lovely old garden where flowers and vines grew in profusion; where box wood lined the walks. It was much larger then it is now for both Mrs. Groves' and Mr. Reiches lots have been cut from it. There was an old graveyard in this garden, and the graves were covered with flat stones where the periwinkle used to creep around and lovingly enfold them. It seemed there the birds sang more sweetly and nature ruled supreme. The great walls around it shut it out from the crowd, but vines and flowers would very often creep over the walls giving passers by an idea of the beauty within. And so, though so many who made the old home so attractive have passed into the world beyond, yet the old house still stands, and the garden of memories is still there.

LA MODE

Hats and Coiffures Given Much Attention

New York, Sept. 3 (A.P.)—The fall fashion discussion has gone to the head and there are two sides to the subject. The hats are on the right side and the coiffure attention is on the left.

All chapeaux are tilted off the center and worn at a jaunty angle over the right side of the head, no matter whether they are the turban or brimmed variety.

With the left side of the head thus exposed, hair dressers ar introducing new coiffures which part the hair on the right side, with the fringes and curls and waves decorating the left.

One of these coiffures, for instance, brings the hair over the left side of the head in a wave and a curl. The wave sweeps into a sausage curl behind and grows into a flat wave, ending at the temple on the right side.

New York, Sept. 3—A digest of the Paris openings forces one to the conclusion that there is nothing more variable than the poor old waistline. It continues to have its ups and downs. Generally speaking, it is down by day and up by night, but there is nothing invariable about that either. Patou and others have made winter pleasanter to look forward to by establishing a just-above-the-hips belt line. It continues to have its ups who have lost count of their calories.

There seems to be a divided opinion also as to skirt fulness, some designers placing it at the back, others at the front, and a lesser contingent distributing it evenly. Skirt lengths do not offer much for excited discussion, but one may wax quite eloquent about puff sleeves—long tight sleeves on dinner dresses, and short sleeves on daytime dresses.

RECIPES

For The Housewife

Never put cogs of a Dover egg beater in water.

To clean piano keys, rub them with alcohol.

Curtain and portiere poles allow the hangings to slip easily if rubbed with hard soap. This is much better than greasing.

A closet can be made moth-proof by applying cedar oil with a brush to all woodwork, and by laying pieces of wood soaked in cedar oil in the drawers.

Hot vinegar added to a pot of dried glue will make it liquid again.

SHOPPING 'JEFFERSON'S'

Yes, indeed, perfectly lovely, and what kind of time did YOU have?

Well, you see what a prophet I am. I told you Fall would shortly be here, and now just look, college open, schools so open they bulge at the walls, and Jefferson's perfectly yummy new Fall frocks here! I find that in order to write calmly and with that air of sophisticated boredom which is a sign of the very young (for all you know I am!) well, any way, to keep from having a swell case of deep sea jitters about these new bags I have to wear an ice bag on my brow. So bend an eye on the following gold mines.

First the materials. All my high-brow gal friends who do clothes snooping in Paris, styling and advertising in New York, and points west are chanting feverishly about these same materials. Work up your memories and cling to ostrich cloth, newer than new, hand knit ribbed weave, Angora Bunny cloth. Heck! Where's that ice bag? Schiaperilli nubby wools, and so on. Don't forget, to be smart you MUST be rough!

Now then, Collegiates, spy out these particular models down at Jefferson's, and don't crowd!

Feather weight Jersey, cut by a genius, fitted by angels. Detachable collars of broad linen or pique. In New York and Baltimore these are selling for campus wear at $10.50. Here they are just $4,95.

Next try on a wine colored ostrich cloth with a divine cream corduroy collar and huge buttons—at $5.95.

And a perfectly chi-chi bag of brown Angora Bunny simply too smooth for words. Also look at a ruby colored ribbed jersey, that looks hand knit, with a brown jacket and belt.

For accessories, gaze at felt hats in Repeal shades, none over $2.25. And also to show you know what you're doing see the Suede and Calf Pumps with built up heel. And plain swanky calf pumps for just $5.00.

Yours with self-repression,
LYDIA LEE.
