4-H CLUB ACTIVITIES

CLUB MEMBERS WIN $158 PRIZES

The boys attending Timonium Fair last week returned last Friday afternoon, September 9th with their calves and pigs. Thy were a tired but happy bunch when they unloaded the animals which represent days of work and of which they are justly proud of the $158 in prize money which they had won, $107 for pigs, $26 for calves, and $25 for judging activities. Few small breeders breed and develop such animals as William Carroll's heifers, Virginia Dulin's fine heifer or Jesse Hurd's pigs and win in ordinary competition but the competition this year was much stronger than in previous years and when Bill Comella, Whitney McCrea and Jesse Hurd can win a place in the open classes in competetion with some of the biggest breeders of the county as they did this year they deserve a lot of credit.

Now is the time to begin making plans for next year. A number of boys are planning to raise a better heifer or a better pig next year than any one else. Their motto is always "to make their best better."

A Few Interesting Facts About The 4-H Club Camp At Timonium

Kent County won the Dairy Cattle Judging Contest. Mike Freeman, president of the Handy Andys was high man in the contest.

The boys from Kent county did their own cooking at a cost of 6 cents per meal and everyone had enough. Believe it or not.

William Willis, of Kennedyville, who was a first year man at Timonium lost his calf the first night. Ask Herschel Carroll about it.

Mike Freeman believes in staying awake all night and sleeping all day. Maybe we would too if we didn't have but one blanket.

Ask Jesse Hurd how old his pigs are. He can make their ages suit the situation.

Bill Comella acquired the name of a "finished speaker" at the banquet Tuesday night. He did make a good talk.

The Dulin sisters showed some of the boys how to show calves. Any way they can do a better job at feeding.

We wonder how Jesse Hurd fed six pigs on less feed than Bill Comella fed his two.

We were afraid Whitney McCrea would join the Laupmont crew. He was always on the job when they wanted a helper. Maybe that is why he never wanted any spending money.

It was a good thing the Kent County treasury didn't fail. Ass't. County Agent Sutton held the boys extra money. It probably would have if the treasurer could have been found every time the boys wanted money.

They will have to make the pig pens larger next year for two reasons. The pigs had company those cold nights and conditions were slightly crowded. (We haven't decided who sneres the loudest, the pigs or their owners.) The other reason is that the boys are planning to hire a fleet of trucks to truck their pigs next year. Can't blame them when eight pigs won $107.00 in prize money.

Why did Edgar Hodgson just get home Monday afternoon? The rest of us left Friday afternoon.

'Anyway it was a good fair and everyone seems pleased.

4-H Club Party

Plans are all made for a 4-H Club Party at Betterton on Thursday night of this week September 15th. Schellinger, Home Demonstration Agent, and Stanley B. Sutton, Asst. County Agent will be in charge of the games, singing and dancing.

The Curbstone Diplomat

WILLIAM S. COLLINS

Three automobiles have gone down the valley in Chestertown during the past month. Not many know we have a valley drive and at that we are not supposed to have. Never the less three automobiles in the last month alone, have driven down Mill street at a good clip, not knowing that it was a dead-end road and have crashed through the fence and gone down in the valley.

Most all the cars that have made this trip have been operated by negroes. The hill is so steep that to get them back to the road again, a tow is needed. One woman this summer was of such large size she could not even climb up the hill and she had to have a tow.

A caution sign marks the end of the street but it looks like a better warning of some sort should be erected.

Do you think our Mayor, second ward Councilman and Clerk wasted a perfectly good trip to Canada? Well, according to their story they observed the eighteenth amendment even while in Canada.

What is more, they never saw on their way up to Canada a single man under the influence of liquor.

No one of course would expect to see anyone under the influence of liquor in the United States as we have prohibition.

In Canada also they saw no evidence of liquor. Canada is not bone-dry.

Think of the large number of tourists that pass through Kent County without seeing evidences of demon rum. So, we might as well claim we have no drinking here.

Judge Bailey has drawn no negroes on the jury in Somerset county. So far as we know no negroes are on juries is the first judical circuit.

According to the Snow Hill Messenger, Lee's attorney's are now trying to delay the trial which is set for October in the Towson Court. Lee's Attorney's have asked a guard for their protection so they can visit Worcester county, the scene of the crime. What the Baltimore Sun intends to do about this we do not know? They are great for speedy justice.

Mr. Harry Russell endorses the Baltimore Post and recommends it to the Eastern Shore.

Eastern Shoreman were mad with the Baltimore Sun about the time of the Salisbury trouble. The Sun was mild compared with the Post. The Post critisized Ritchie strongly for not having arrests made. For months afterwards they continued to harp like this. "Two months and still nothing done about the Salisbury lynching." The Post belongs to te Scripps Howard chain of newspapers, whose management is not concerned with the welfare of Maryland.

FURROWS

BY JOSIAH ALLEN WEATHERBY

Tom Barclay's boy went to college a few years ago and finished last June. He ain't got no job yet. When he went away he didn't know what he wuz goin to do and when he came home after four years he still didn't know what he wuz goin to do. He don't know yet. I figger he ain't goin to do nothin as long as Tom supports him while he sets around and reads all the time. But that ain't none of my business.

Elmore (that's his name) took education while he wuz at college. He said he didn't expert to teach school when he finished but he might have to, so he might as well be prepared. And ten he said he had to take something and it might as well be education as anything else. He spends most of his time readin detective stories. He says they stimulate the mind. I ain't found out yet what the stimulation is fer in his case. It seems to be fer more readin of detective stories.

Well, Elmore didn't get no school to teach and it looks like he don't aim to try to get any other kind of a job. He don't even offer to help in the store when Tom needs a little help. Not that he has business enough to keep two men busy. But Tom has been at it a long time and he spent a lot of money on that boy. Tom don't say much about his boy, but when he does talk he always leaves the impression that he is satisfied with the way things has worked out. He never asks Elenore to do no work and Elenore don't do none.

When I wuz a boy everybody wuz expected to work except the rish and they didn't have to. But nowadays it looks like most everybody is tryin to ape the rich. Poor folks boys, don't want to work no more'n rich folks boys. Fact is, nobody seems to want to work now days. Feiers wants positions and not jobs. A position carries a salary with it. A job carries only wages. Boys like Elmore Barclay don't want jobs. They want positions. Elmore said he hadn't decided yet whether he would go into banking and finance or maybe he would study law.

It sems like now that schools is fer the purpose of keepin people from workin. Children don't do no work while they are in school and when they git through school they want to do less. And it ain't only college; it is all kinds of school. Young folks go to school to learn how not to work. Elmore Barclay ain't the only one that don't work. He is only typical. I ain't seen none of them come back from college and want to work. They all want positions.

In our section trained brains might help us to git more out of what we grow on the farms, if them brains wuz used fer something besides readin detective stories. Elmore said the other day that anybody could keep a store. He didn't want to keep store. He might try 'em on mowin the lawn.
