RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

FORASMUCH, as in the providence of Almighty God, the soul of our fellow Trustee of the Chestertown, M. E. Church, Charles H. Jefferson, has departed hence, and being delivered from the burden of the flesh, is in joy and felicity with his Lord.

AND FORASMUCH, as our deceased brother was steadfast, unmovable, and always abounding in the work of the Kingdom in his sojourn of life, and we, who survive him, know that his labor was not in vain.

AND FORASMUCH, as he in his long and saintly life reflected in an unusual degree the spirit and life of Christ, and thus merited being numbered with those of whom it is said "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

AND FORASMUCH, as one of the graces of the spirit that was his portion, was his unceasing labor to bring others to a saving knowledge of the Lord, he, doubtless, has reaped the reward of the promise that "They who turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars for ever and ever."

AND FORASMUCH, as he was given much to prayer, being a righteous man, his prayers were fervent and effectual—abiding in Christ and Christ abiding in him, the joy of the Lord was his strength.

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that the Board of Trustees would express their tribute to the memory of their departed fellow member, Charles H. Jefferson.

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that these resolutions be recorded in the minutes, a copy be published in the newspapers, and a copy be sent to the family.

WHAT WOULD BE THE RESULT
(Copied from the Kent News)

"With the carnival parade of automobiles and the constant flow of traffic with no accidents or even fenders scratched! in this section, we wonder what would have been the story if booze had been flowing as in the days of the horse and buggy.

Times have changed during the past dozen years, modes of travel different than when our forefathers took the day off for a picnic and we have grown up free from the legalized saloon. To bring back any sembiance of the old Wet days would, with the machine minded age, wreck havoc with the traveling public. Our records would be filled with accounts of accidents and our hospitals and cemeteries would take on the aspect of the Flu epidemic of 1918."

What is more it might be added that there have been no accidents at the regattas this summer and few accidents in automobiles coming home from the many dances that have been held. Yes, when the prohibition law was passed it did away with liquor altogether.

Just as we were promised. The travelling public is now safe, the hospitals are not full. Also do you remember the promises that the jails and insane asylums would be emptied.

The one about the cemeteries though is a new one. Prohibition has caused a depression in the cemetery's business.

Chestertown is promised a celebration this coming Hallowe'en night. Merchants on Cross street are planning to hold a free street dance and give prizes for costumes, etc.

In recent years Hallowe'en nights have been very dead, there being scarcely a dozen people in costumes, in Chestertown. It is the merchants hopes to revive the old holiday spirit.

The last street dance drew a very large attendance.

Last year we published an article about a large size pig taking a swim well out in the river opposite Emory's wharf.

Two sundays ago a little pig swam all the way across the Chester River from Queen Anne's to Riverside farm in Kent County. The swim was at least a quarter of a mile.

There are two theories as to why piggy swam the river. One is that he had been looking over at Kent County for some time and thought it was a good new region to explore, so he took a chance and made it. The other theory is that the pig was wading and got out over its head. He started swimming and this threw his head way back so he could not see so well. The only land in sight being across the river and he swam to it.

Speaking of animals swimming; a party of fishermen from town on their way down the river saw what they thought was a turtle swimming near North West Point.

Grabbing a net they attempted to catch it. When they drew close to the swimmer they saw it was a squirrel. They dipped him with the net and made him a captive aboard the boat. They proceeded on to Queenstown to fish. Here Mr. Squirrel escaped and jumped overboard. He was netted again and held captive until the fishermen returned to the Country Club Wharf at Chestertown. Again Mr. Squirrel escaped and the last seen of him, he was running on the gas and water pipes under the pier. There was no catching him when he was out of the water.

FURROWS

BY JOSIAH ALLEN WEATHERBY

It is interesting to watch people claim credit fer success and try to evade responsibility fer failure. A case in point is the President of the United States. In 1928 he wuz talkin loud and often about the wise policies of the Republican Party bein responsible fer the unprecedented prosperity of this country, and sayin as how the voters ought to continue that party in power. It wuz a good talkin point then because most everybody wuz feeling prosperous. A lot of workin people had jobs and wuz spending all they made buyin automobiles, radios, stocks and the like. It wuz a case of easy come, easy go with most folks. Of course there wuz a lot of people out of work or, at least, didn't have jobs, but not much wuz said about them except by Mr. Ethelbert Stewart of the Department of Labor. He kept tellin the truth about unemployment and when this here depression come along he still kept on tellin the truth about unemployment.

Well, Mr. Hoover got tired of hearin the truth told so much and he had Mr. Stewart retired fer the good of the service. Hoover concluded that it wuzn't so good fer the service (and the Republican Party) if the people knew too much about how many people wuz out of work during his administration. But it won't do him no good to try to hide the facts from the people. A good many people has already made up their minds how they are goin to vote in November, and my guess it it won't be fer Mr. Hoover.

The President is goin out on the stump in October and tell the people a lot of things. I'm wonderin if he'll still claim credit fer the Republican Party fer all the depression as well as the prosperity that we had before his administration. It looks like he ought to be willin to take the blame fer the depression if he wants credit fer good times. But he won't say nothin about being to blame. He'll lay that on general economic conditions and then tell the people that if they'll give him a chance he'll bring back prosperity.

There is some republicans that is so dyed in the wool with the idea of their party bein responsible fer prosperity that they have to go clear back to Wilson's administration to find the blame fer this here depression. But that's the way with some people when they git cornered. And if the republicans ever wuz cornered they are now.

I ain't sayin as how the democrats will bring back good times if Mr. Roosevelt is elected. Leave it to the big moneyed men to see that the business of the country don't pick up much under the democrats. They wuz tryin to make it appear that good times wuz on the way back by boostin prices in Wall Street, when the people of Maine decided to go democratic, and then these big boys throwed a monkey-wrench into the machinery by throwin their holdins back on the market and depressin stock prices again. That wuz just to show the people that Wall Street didn't have no confidence in the democrats.

Well, you just go back four years and read some of Hoover's speeches and see what he claimed fer the Republican Party then, and then just make a few comparisons with what he has to say next month along the same line. If that party could give us so much prosperity up to 1928 why couldn't it keep on giving us the same kind, or at least some kind of prosperity? Whenever folks take the credit fer good times they ought to be willin to take the blame fer the bad times. But the republicans won't do it. They ain't built that way.
