3 CENT STAMP DOOMED

Indications are that the 3 cent stamp is doomed and that the 2 cent stamp will soon be again used for first class postage.

The House postoffice subcommittee investigating the postal service unanimously voted for restoration of the 2-cent postage rate on first class mail matter.

The group announced "this action was taken in view of representations made to the subcommittee at its hearings, the falling off in the volume of first class mail since the 3-cent rate went into effect July 6 and the Postmaster General's recent public statement that the 2-cent rate should be restored as soon as the postal business warranted it."

The committee, now holding hearings on postal matters, will report to Congress at the December session.

LIQUOR VIOLATOR ARRESTED

Federal agents were in Chestertown, yesterday, Friday and arrested "Slim" Houston, colored for the sale of liquor in Chestertown. It is reported that the Federal officers have had local men in their employ who have purchased liquor that will lead to the arrest of a number of other local liquor violators.

Eggs In Seven Ways

You could ring the changes on eggs for a whole week easily and never repeat yourself; coddled, poached, fried, scrambled, omelet (flat French omelet and the puffy variety), creamed hard-cooked eggs, or baked in individual dishes with a topping of grated cheese. All good and quickly made. If you know how to get the fat hot, drop in the eggs, move the pan off the frame and cook by dipping the fat over the yolk (perhaps putting it back over a low flame for a moment if fat cools) a fried egg may be almost as delicate as a poached egg. Fried eggs need not be greasy nor the whites hard and rubbery. Try it.

They may be scrambled in the pan with butter or in the double-boiler with milk. The latter way is better, especially for children. And what a food an egg is, with its complete protein, fat, minerals, (especially phosphorus and iron) and vitamins, especially vitamins A and D. Any leftover vegetable, particularly cooked corn, is good with scrambled eggs.

Another Word About Milk

Milk is always needed. Why You just cannot get the calcium you need for teeth, bones, and every cell of the body and to insure proper functioning, without it, unless you spend a great deal of money and ingenuity in the search. Other foods have it in small amounts, yes, but the nearest runner up to milk in calcium content, is miles behind it.

One of our leading nutritionists, Dr. H. C. Sherman, has said that every woman ought to have a quart a day from infancy till she has weaned her last child. And there is my favorite true story of the thirty generations of rats, one bred from the other and the last pair better than the first, who never had any other food than whole milk, whole wheat and a little salt. Like it or not, the rat has been proved to behave much as we do in reaction to food and disease. So here we have a safe and sound basis for a diet (not an exclusive diet) with the raw fruit, tomatoes, or oranges, salads and vegetables, for vitamin C and variety.

Fancy drinks of cold milk to which an egg is added with any seasoning desired, chocolate, vanilla, or fruit juices, gives ideal nourishment as well as hot-weather pleasure. A clever mother can divert the affections of her children from the soda fountain with these enticing beverages. If the milk is alreay very cold, little or no ice is needed, but they are frothy and more attractive if shaken up in a mason jar or whippd to a froth with the egg beater. One piece of ice may be added to the shaker if desired, but do not dilute them by using finely chopped ice.

FURROWS

BY JOSIAH ALLEN WEATHERBY

Marchin Marchin to Washington seems to be the most popular type of recreation fer the unemployed. Now the dirt farmers is goin to march on Washington. In view of the success which crowned the crusade of the late Bonus Expeditionary Force, it would look like a bunch of farmers would have more sense than to try to repeat the doubtful experiment. When Congress meets the first of December it will still be the same democratic House and the same republican Senate, and Mr. Hoover illl still be in the White House, and probably "General" Hurley will still be in the Cabinet. It would look like settin the stage fer the second battle of Anacostia.

I ain't fer any such fool line of action. If the farmers can't do no better than that, they better stay at home and do the chores this winter, and continue to eat side meat and beans fer awhile longer. Mr. Hoover ain't goin to do nothin fer the farmers. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is goin to help the farmers out by loanin them money at 7 per cent. interest, while the big banks is gittin money to loan to stock speculators fer 2 per cet. And that's the way the Republican Party has always helped the farmers of this country. And that's about as much help as the small farmers of this country can ever expect from the Republican Party which is controlled by the big manufacturin and bankin interests.

It don't make no difference to them fellers that the farmers is already mortgaged up to their necks (includin their souls) and can't pay their taxes which is still based on assessment valuations made durin the period of high inflation. A lot of farms will be sold to satisfy the demands of the tax mongers and them farmers won't need no 7 per cent. money. Aout all they'll need will be a place in some secluded cemetery and some pine box coffins to rest in. It looks like a sure case of starvation fer a lot of the farmin population.

It's my opinion that about the only kind of march that will help the farmers any will be a march to the polls on the eighth of November fer the purpose of eelctin somebody to the presidency and to Congress that won't think the only way to help farmers is to loan them some more money at high interest rates so that they can't ever git out of the hole they are already in. They ought to demand of all present candidates fer the presidency, the House and the Senate that they pledge themselves publicly to balance the budget by reducin Government expenses and not by layin more taxes on a people that is already taxed to death. At least two hundred thousand of the present big army of Washington's unemployed could be spared from the Government pay roll, and that would help a lot in balancin the budget fer 1932. The only good a lot of them people is doin down there is to work up a lot of stuff fer the Government printin office to print, that nobody ever reads, and which if they read wouldn't do them no good. There is too many people in this country that thinks they should have a position at a big salary to be paid out of the tax payers pockets. A little honest toil might help them to git some of their self-respect back.

No sir, I ain't fer marchin on Washington, but I am strong fer marchin to the polls and votin fer people that is goin to try to do something fer the farmers besides gittin them deeper in debt. Borrowin money at 7 per cent. ain't goin to help them none. But that is just the kind of help Mr. Hoover offers in all his schemes fer the farmers. He ain't done nothin yet to relieve the poor distressed classes of this country. I know a lot of people that is goin to the polls in November and vote fer Mr. Hover fer ex-president.
