Women's Page

BY A WOMAN

ELIZABETH BLACKWELL

Women who are now found both in the business and professional world elbowing their way equally with the men, may turn their minds back to the middle of the last century and think what a struggle the early professional pioneers had to reach this goal.

And that brings one back to Elizabeth Blackwell, the first women to obtain a medical diploma in the United States. She was born at Bristol England in 1821, but when in her teens she was brought to America, where she in connection with her sisters, opened a boarding school in Cincinnatti, Ohio.

But she chafed at the limitations placed by society on women and in 1844 the school was given up as Miss Blackwell determined to become the medical apostle of her sex. After three years further work as a teacher, during which time she devoted all her leisure to the study of medical works, she went to Philadelphia, where she applied in vain for admission into the medical schools. After making strenuous efforts, she was at last, obtained admission to the Medical College in Geneva, N. Y. After studying there two years she graduated in 1849 with the highest honors and then took her degree of M. D.

Shortly after this she went abroad to study her chosen profession further. In Paris she was told that it would be impossible for her to be admitted to either school or hospitals unless she adopted male attire. This was very repugnant to the taste of Miss Brewster, who had as her main object, the recognition of female physicians. After a long time and much perseverance on her part, she was admitted to the Maternity Hospital and allowed to visit other hospitals.

Completing her studies in Paris and London, she returned to New York and there established herself in practice

In 1852, she delivered a series of lectures to women on health and physical dvelopment and in the following year she founded the New York Infirmary for Women and Children. Twelve years later she with her sister Emily opened the Women Medical College.

She was called to London and connected heself with the Women's Medical College there. She wrote a number of books among them, Counsels to parents on the Moral Education of their children, and "Pioneer work in opening the Medical Profession to women.

Miss Brewster died in 1910 after she had seen the result of her labors in women being admitted to all medical colleges and schools.

HEALTH

A skilled physician was asked if it were wise for a left-handed person to be made to use his right hand. This is his reply:

"For some unexplained reason one side of the body dominates most of the tasks undertaken. This applies not only to muscle acts but it is true of common sensations and even of vision. It a right-handed person is properly examined he is found to be right-legged and right-eyed as well. In some cases the right side dominates. If only one hand is to be used there is no hesitation, the right hand moves into action. If the two sides are nearly on a par fine recording instruments would show frequent momentary indecision as to which hand would be used for the job in hand. In the course of time a right-handed person has had his machinery running in groves in which the right side does most of the tasks. When things run in grooves the higher brain centers are not called on.

If a right-handed person tries to do something with the left hand he is reminded that few ruts or grooves run over that route. His higher centers are called on—first, to make the decision, and second, to help out in doing the job because of the increased difficulty due to the deficiency of ruts. This results in momentary indecision, in halting, in some confusion, and in inefficiency of effort.

All of which reversed applied to left-handed people. If a left-handed adult, adolescent, or older child is trained to be right-danded he finds the paths to and from the newly used centers not worn into smooth deep ruts. He stifles his established impulse to use the old ruts and forces himself to use the new with less perfect poise.

LA MODE

Victorian modes are the styles worn these days, though a very few years ago every one was laughing at the same styles.

Victorian

You have to be Victorian if you intend to be up-to-date in Paris this season. Not only the puffed sleeves, the high neck lines and the wide shoulders, but also the plaid dress. The plaid wool dress, touched up with a bit of white at the neck, was a favorite among Victorians, and here it is back again when we'd only just stopped laughing at the quaint Victorian era.

The All-Sleeve Coat

The little fur coat is making a hit in Paris. Not the little fur coat of yesteryear, but the little coat with the big sleeves which ends at the hips and has a soft leather belt rather higher than the normal waistline. Nearly all sleeves, the coat has a tiny roll collar and rather wide cuffs.

Speaking of wool blouses, guimpe dresses and suspender or overall skirts are going stronger than ever. Helm has some good nnes, with the skirt mounting into a smooth sleeveless bodice in front, while the back disappears in the suntan manner, to be worn with wool lace or hand-knit sweater blouses with elbow-puffed sleeves. Lyolene also shows original variations on this theme. The frocks, like most of her suits are in special, soft but hairy pattern-jersey. K. C.

RECIPES

Fruit Meringue

1 cupful stewed strained peaches, apricots or apples.
2 tablespoonfuls to one-third cupful sugar
1 egg
1-4 cupful fine dry crumbs

Separate egg, beat yolk until thick and lemon colored. Cover bottom of a buttered pudding pan with the crumbs. Mix fruit pulp and egg yolk and put on top of crumbs. Bake fifteen to twenty minutes in a moderate oven or until set. Cover with meringue made of stiffly beaten white of egg and one tablespoonful of sugar. Brown slightly in moderate oven from ten to twelve minutes.

Pinapple Fritters

2 tablespoonfuls butter
1-4 cupful sugar
2 egg yolks
1 cupful flour
2 teaspoonfuls baking powder
1-2 teaspoonful salt
2 tablespoonfuls milk
1-2 cupfuls shredded pineapple
1 tablespoonful lemon juice
2 egg whites, beaten stiff

Cream the butter and sugar and beat in the egg yolks. Sift together the flour, baking powdr and salt and add alternately with the milk. Fold in the pineapple, lemon juice and stiffly beaten egg whites. Heat the fat to 270 dgrees and drop the batter in by small spoonfuls. Fry until light and a golden brown. Drain on soft paper and sift with powdered sugar.

Rhubarb Sponge Pie

1 pound rhubarb
1-2 cupful sugar
2 tablespoonfuls water
1 package lemon-flavored gelatin

Wash rhubarb in cold water. Cut into one-inch pieces. Put in sauce-pan with sugar and water. Cover closely and boil over low heat until rhubarb is reduced to smooth pulp. Measure two cupfuls of this pulp and pour over the gelatin while hot. Stir until thoroughly disolved. Set aside until cool and slightly thickened. Beat with rotary beater until light and spongy. Pile into a baked and cooled pastry shell. Spread with the following meringue. (Makes sufficient for one 9-inch pie.)

Meringue

2 egg whites
6 tablespoonfuls confectioner's sugar.
1-2 teaspoonful vanilla

Beat egg whites until very stiff. Fold in the sugar lightly and add the vanilla.

MATTER OF MINDS

"Yes, Gladys said that Fred was too frivolous and never looked to the future. Said she wanted a man who was far-minded."

"How about Reggy Dense?"

"Oh, she says he's too far-minded. His mind is so far away he can't catch up with it."

His Debut

Reporter—What was your first experience in public speaking?

Successful Merchant—Talking over the party line in my old home town.

Gave Him the Mitten

"Were you one of the many fooling with the stock market?"

"Not me, I was serious, the market did the fooling."—Stray Bits.

Current Wit and Humor

IMPOSSIBLE

They were conversing on art.

"I know an artist who painted a cobweb so realistically on his dining room ceiling that the maid spent an hour trying to get it down," said Dawber.

His friend laughed.

"I'm afraid I can't believe that, old chap," he replied.

"Why not?" said Dawber, hurt. "Artists have been known to do such things."

"Perhaps," returned the friend; "but maids haven't!"

Gothic Influence

Gothic architecture is based on the use of the pointed arch in place of the round arch and the use of buttresses to balance the tendency of a heavy vaulted roof to push the walls outwards. Thus buildings were made higher, with many vertical lines leading the eye upward. Between buttresses great windows were left in the walls, which came to be filled with magnificent stained glass. Decorative carving and statuary were lavishly used inside and out. Wherever these elements appear in a modern building it is safe to suspect that the architect has gone back to Gothic for inspiration.
