DEMOCRATIC TICKET

For President:
FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT
Governor of New York

For Vice-President:
JOHN N. GARNER
of Texas

For United States Senator
MILLARD E. TYDINGS
of Havre de Grace

For Congresman, First Congressional District
T. ALAN GOLDSBOROUGH of Denton, Md.

NEXT TUESDAY, OCTOBER 11th, will be the last day on which new residents and those who have become of age may register in order to vote in the November election. The Registrars set on October 18th for revision only.

THE DEATH OF Congressman Hon. J. Charles Linthicum, of Baltimore, who died Wednesday at the Maryland General Hospital after a short illness, creates a loss to the Democrats of that city and the state. Mr. Linthicum has served eleven terms in congress and was a candidate for re-election this fall.

REPORTS FROM Baltimore City and the counties indicate a substantial majority for Roosevelt in the coming election. The possibility of Democratic victory is stronger than since the election of Woodrow Wilson, and with the large majority of registered Democrats over Republicans in this county a Democratic victory is practically assured.

The congressional contest in this district between Congressman Goldsborough for re-election and Mr. Harry Poebus the Republican candidate is, perhaps the most interesting to our voters. Mr. Goldsborough's record is before you and we presume he will make his candidacy on that record. If Mr. Roosevelt is elected president and Mr. Goldsborough is returned to Congress it is logical and reasonable to suppose that he will be able to do more for the people of the Eastern Shore than he has ever been able to do for them before, as he has always heretofore been handicapped because of belonging to a political monority.

From reports received from the Eastern Shore Counties the full Democratic ticket will be elected by a handsome majority.

MARYLAND OYSTERS SAFE

HEALTH DEPARTMENT REGULATIONS ASSURES SAFE FOOD

One may eat Maryland oysters without any fear of their purity as a result of regulations laid down by the State Department of Health for the handling of the bi-values in the shucking houses.

The demand for Maryland oysters has materially affects the lively-hood of hundreds of Kent County people, and while the shucking house and handling regulations may seem a hardship at first, the approval by the health departments of other states is worth a great deal of money to the oystermen and packers.

Here are some extracts from the letter which was signed by Mr. A. L. Sullivan, Chief of the Bureau of Food and Drugs:

"No person should undertake the shucking and shipment of oysters unless prepared to install the necessary equipment, and operate his plant in accordance with the Public Health requirements.

"Packers must ship only oysters which are free from added water and which have not been adulterated by excessive washing. Any other policy will be ruinous to the industry.

"'Oyster plants should be put in first-class condition; floors re-surfaced where necessary; benches must be of approved design and in good condition. Where metal has become badly rusted, benches should be re-covered and seams soldered. Blocks must be removable.

"We ask that you give special attention to water supplies, wash stands, toilets, hand washing and to efficient cleaning and sterilizing of equipment.

"Apparatus, including sealship cans and other returnabel cans, should be thoroughly cleaned daily by the use of brushes, hot water and washing powder, then rinsed and sterilized. Were no steam is available, chlorine compounds must be used in addition to hot water. * * * *

"All cans must bear your certificate number. This includes sealship and embossed cans which bear the shipper's name. All cans must be sealed.

"Employees should be examnied beginning work. Examinations must be made by physicians approved by the State Board of Health."

PHOEBUS VS GOLDSBOROUGH

Prof. E. J. Clarke, Editor of the Worcester Democrat, has the following to say in reference to Mr. Harry Phoebus' criticism of Congressman T. Alan Goldsborugh. Mr. Phoebus is the Republican nominee for congress in opposition to Congressman Goldsborough:

"We have always maintained that when a man enters the field of criticism, he should take care he goes well fortified himself; thus establishing a reserve force, should the enemy cause his advance forces to break ground. Without these thr is frquent disaster. We have not noticed this in the case of the Somerset aspirant for Congressional honors. He leaves his rear unprotected, and, in our opinion, he is heading for a most decisive political defeat.

"Mr. Phoebus has chosen to place a money value on Mr. Goldsborough's services as a representative of the First Congressional District. We can readily understand this trend of the Phoebus mind. He is nothing if not commercial. He would be expected to gauge every situation by the measure of dollars and cents. He probably, is unable to see anything but pecuniary profit in any line of endeavor. He evidently sells mental ability even as he would sell his automobiles. He is strictly material in his attitudes, and his entire ambitions lead him along financial avenues. No one would expect to see Phoebus shining in Congressional debate. His views on National affairs—tariff, foreign relations, peace and war, agriculture, all sorts of legal tangles—wouldn't be apt to illuminate the pages of a congressional record. He would, without doubt, be a silent witness of the doings of a National Assembly and he could be depended upon always to vote as he says he expects to do on the different phases of the prohibition question: namely, "on the one most likely to pass."

"Now, there's a statement which would cause a hurling back of his question upon himself. "Is he worth it?" Is a man who takes his cue from the exigences of the case worth it, no matter whether viewed from the standpoint of dollars and cents or any other aspect? Has he the mental and moral stamina that goes to make up a statesman? Has the all-around development that should be in evidence when we choose our legislators? Is he, by comparison, "worth it" when the name of Godsborough is placed alongside that of Phoebus.

"We do not wish to be understood as belitlling the value of a sound business sense in connection with any calling. It is indeed an asset not to be despised; and, possibly, some of our representatives have achieved wonderful results in their legislature careers by reason of a rugged appreciation of business principles; but, they have been otherwise endowed. They have been favored with such mental qualifications as we see in a Goldsborough rather than in a Phoebus. They have been men who looked at national affairs through lenses of suitable adjustment, rather than through those which obscured one's eyesight, even as a silver dollar would, in the place of the usual crystal.

"Mr. Phoebus' question as to the pecuniary worth of Mr. Goldsborough can not fail to draw an inquiry from the public as to his own valuation. If he isn't "worth it," what's he going to do about it? Will he petition Congress for a cut in salary, commensurate with the return he thinks he can make to that assembly? We advise him to go slow along that line, until his auto business picks up a bit, provided he is experiencing the same depresion of which other dealers complain. His salary would probably need a little subsidizing.

"If he thinks he is "worth it," then we look for the salaries of all the other Congressmen to be raised, provided he can bring the National Assembly to his way of thinking. It's a far cry from the legislature worth of a Phoebus to that of a Goldsborough and it will take more than the high powered commercial salesmanship of some people to put across at Washington any diferent opinion. We look for a raid on the United States treasury if Phoebus' talents are rated on a bar with those of the incumbent.

"Just what Mr. Phoebus is "worth" is illustrated by the value he puts upon his convictions regarding the prohibition question. A bone-dry candidate, so long as he thinks he can ride into office upon the back of Shore aridity, he has flopped over to the "wets," because he thinks he can get the support of the Association opposed to Prohibition. He has played up to the Churches in his "official organ," for reason apparent to all. He has, in effect, appealed to these from a moral standpoint, wheras, he is now using the prohibition issue solely as an aide to political preferment; and, aside from the Phoebus connection with this mode of procedure, we would like to call the attention of all prohibitionists as to just where their pet proposition has settled itself and just how far it his drifted away from moral uplift.

"When it comes to a comparison of values between Goldsborough and Phoebus, we do not fear the result of public opinion, whether considered from a mental, moral, or pecuniary standpoint. Mr. Phoebus has started something he can not finish; and, apparently he has started it simply for the sake of starting something. He, evidently, thinks it's best to be noticed, no matter in what light. He has started a ruction which will prove a boomerang, and he already has been called upon to answer the question: "Are you worth is, Mr. Phoebus?"

WHY SAVE?

Saving money just to have it is, of course, better than not saving at all, but the joy and satisfaction of saving money for a definite reason puts content and enthusiasm into our lives.

Here are some sensible reasons for putting money aside in a separate account where it will be ready when needed.

A few dollars saved each month may help take the "ax" out of taxes.

Insurance is a wonderful protection for the family in case life's plans are interrupted. Premiums are no hardship if they are saved in monthly installments.

Vacations are needed, but are much more pleasant if cash has been saved for the expenses.

The music of wedding bells may be much sweeter if the habit of saving has been cultivated.

Home, whether it be the humble vine-clad cottage or the more pretentious palace, is made possible by saving.

Yours for service,
