BASIC MILK PRICE CUT

22 CENT CUT NOW IN AFFECT

Following the opportunity to make a new basic allottment, producers showed their ability to make milk by increasing production 14 per cent. in the first half of October. This heavy overproduction caused the Arbiter to cut the amount of milk to be paid for at basic price. During the first half of October, as in previous months, producers were paid basic price for 90 per cent of the basic amount. During the last half of the month basic, pay for 80 per cent. of th basic amount was in effect. In other words, taking the month as a whole the farmer will get full pay for 85 per cent. of his basic allotmtnt. Ten per cent of production up to basic amount sold at cream price and balance at surplus price.

Bginning November 1st, the new basic goes into effect. A new and lower price on basic milk has been announced but whether the price will apply to the full amount of basic milk will not be known until the end of November, since the per cent to be paid for at basic price will be determined by the per cent of basic milk actually sold as bottled milk. This is a new arangement ordered by the Arbiter, Dr. Clyde L. King. The price for milk used to produce cream and the price of surplus are influenced by the average price of 92 score butter in New York. These prices are announced at the end of the month and are used in paying for the milk delivered during that month.

The new price for basic at Chestertown Plant is for 4 per cent milk, $1.62 per cwt. compared with $1.84 per cwt. as has been the price for some months past. The price of milk has been cut one cent ($.01) per quart to consumers. Effort is being made in a National Campaign to increase the consumption of milk. The slogan for this campaign is "Put the Milk Pitcher Back on the Table." Unless consumption increases or production decreases—lower price levels are indicated. Producers ar urged to control production again as they did before opprtunity for a new basic was presented; also to use milk freely at home.

(THE STREET DANCE)

Chestertown had the largest Hallow'een celebration this year that it has ever had. At an early hour Monday evening the crowd came rolling in. Some were here to see the fun and some were here to take part in the activities. Cross Street the scene of the festivities was packed and jammed.

A greased pole had been erected on the bandstand and on top of this was placed a prize. The pole had been smoothed down to insure against anyone getting splinters and with grease applied to this made the pole so slippery it could not be climbed.

Try hard they did and greasy they got, to the enjoyment of the spectators. When the fun had gone far enough the management allowed a little team work and Skippy Everett, of Chestertown was pushed to the top and grabbed the prize.

With the pole out of the way, "Cy Johnson and his Pumphin Eaters," climbed the band-stand and soon the dance was on.

At the intermission a pie eating contest was staged. Five huckleberry pies were brought out and one was promptly swiped, which limited the contest to four contestants. These grabbed the pie plates in the hands and ate without the assistance of their fingers. They just had to dive in head first. No handicap was allowed for long noses. All received an encouraging push at the start so their cheeks would become familiar with the huckleberries. Robert Hopkins of Chestertown was the first to empty his plate and received the prize. Pie that got in the ears did not have to be eaten.

With the pie contest over the dance was resumed. The Hallow'een spirit prevailed. Henry Gill was carried on the shoulders of the college boys, who endorsed him for mayor. Henry says "Too bad they do not have a vote."

The yells went up "Turn loose the pigs," "Turn loose them pigs," "lets have the pigs," "Pigs." From many a throat went out a lusty yell. The dance was sidetracked again. The first pig turned loose was for boys under twelve years old.

Strenuous efforts were necessary to get the crowd back so as to give the pigs a chance. During this an occasional egg would rain down on the band stand. Finally they were turned loose and were fought for with the same effort a drowning man grabs for a boat. Everybody's life seemed to depend on catching a pig. One pig had to be divided. One man that caught a pig put it in his car which was instantly surrounded by a crowd. The man afraid of losing his pig left town. It is needless to say the pigs themselves furnished music for their own act.

Then the prizes for the costumes were awarded, they were won by Helen Davis, of Rock Hall; Catherine Metcalfe, of Chestertown; James Williams, of Chestertown; and Covey Chilcutt, of Chestertown.

During the celebration there was one great big sell. One young man from a village near Chestertown came in dressed as a young woman. A very attractive young flapper he made as most everyone who saw him agreed. The sex was very well concealed.

He stood along aside of another boy from the same village and became aware that he was not recognized. So they struck up a conversation. The boy thought he had gotten quite a break. Especially so, when the supposed loose acting woman suggested they take a walk. The walk ended in a very secluded spot and a petting party started. (Not being a Brevity paper it is time to stop). Murder in such cases as these should be justifiable.

(Requirements of The New President)

Nope, we don't mean Hoover or Roosevelt but the new president of Washington College, a president of more importance to the Eastern Shore

It is needless to tell the often told story of what an asset Washington College is to the community. How, it gives many a chance for an education that otherwise would be denied them if they had to be sent away to school, is a small asset when compared to the financial advantage.

Now in this time of depression the town is finding it a big help. Chestertown is better off than many other towns on the Shore that have only agricultural and water interests to draw from.

Washington College receives an appropriation from the state and what we need is a man that can have the appropriation increased or else keep it from being decreased. Dr. Titsworth raised the standards of Washington College and was able to get an increased appropriation. Let us hope that the new president can do as well.

The Eastern Shore is entitled to a good College, so if given an able leader, let us help him keep the college on its present high plane.

MRS. FIXIT IN LATIN

Two college girls were having lunch together.

"My dear," said one, "why do you always call your mother 'the mater'?"

"Because," answerd the other girl, "she managed to find husbands for all my seven sisters."
