TO HOLD MARKET WEEKLY

FARM AND HOME MARKET TO BE HELD EACH SATURDAY

At the request of those selling at the Sample Farm and Home Market on November 5 arrangements have been made through the kindness of Mr. Thomas W. Eliason to hold the market in front of the Eliason Building on High street every Saturday morning until the Market can be established in winter quarters.

The response to the Sample Market which was fostered by the Kent County Chamber of Commerce as an experiment last week was very enthusiatic. Suggestions were made by townspeople as to what they would like to have and a general feeling out of the trend of demands in all lines was very helpful to the men and women who plan to use the market system in selling.

Directors carrying the names, addresses and products of Kent's pioneer markteers were published by the Chamber and given out with purchases and to those interested in the movement. A number of orders have already come in to those farmers and homemakers listed and it is expected that such orders will increase as the market strengthens itself.

While no organization of the farmers and homemakers has yet taken place the plan is for each person selling to handle his or her own goods or make arrangements for someone else to do so. Other markets have proved this to be a better plan than by having a general manager which adds to the expense and takes off of the pofits of those who have things for sale. This system also assures a higher standard of goods.

SCHOOL BOND DEFEATED

EVERY PRECINCT PROTESTS $100,000 ISSUE

The official count of the Chestertown High School bond ballots showed an overwhelming defeat of that issue by a majority of 3385. Every precinct in the county showed a large majority opposing the issue. The result was not a surprise to the most optomistic of its supporters as it was very apparent that it did not have a chance of getting through. Its overwhelming defeat may be attributed to the opposition in many parts of the county to the centralizing of high school activities in Chestertown and the county-wide opposition to increasing the bonded indebtness at this time.

"THREE ON A MATCH"

Four Players Star In New Film

Mervyn LeRoy Directs

The movie-going public is given material for speculation over the problem of who gives the best performance in the star-studded cast of "Three On A Match," the First National picture which comes to the New Lyceum Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday, November 16 and 17.

Four players of star rating head the cast of this picture, and the supporting roles are given to prominent featured players. Warren William, who scored so highly as the star of "The Mouthpiece" and "The Dark Horse," has the leading male role, and the three leading ladies are Ann Dvorak, Joan Blondell and Bette Davis, any one of whom has popularity and appeal enough to draw an audience of her own.

Allen Jenkins, who shared honors with Lee Tracy, in the success of the hilarious "Blessed Event," is also prominently cast and is credited with an equally fine performance. Lyle Talbot, who was lately seen in "Stranger In Town" and "Big City Blues," plays an important role which proves to be another step up in his climb to stardom. Others who receive acclaim for their roles in "Three On A Match," are Grant Mitchell, Sheila Terry, Clara Blandick, Buster Phelps, Glenda Farrell, Humphrey Bogart and Patricia Ellis.

Mervyn LeRoy directed, and the script was written by the writing team of Kubec Glasmon and John Bright, who turned out such successes as "Public Enemy," "Smart Money," "Blonde Crazy," "Taxi," "Union Depot," and "The Crowd Roars." The screen play is by Lucien Hubbard.

Valliant for Truth

"Valiant for Truth has gone; alas, that he left us;
Valiant for Truth, the leader that we love.
Where shall we find his like? Grim death, thou has bereft us
Of what great force that lifted us above.

Valiant for Truth, thy voice rang strong and clear and loudly;
We had not borne to have its accents fall;
Nor would we choose, O Knight, that thou shouldst go less proudly,
Ardent and young, upon the last, long trail.

What though we stumble blindly over ways that darken,
We are not worthy if we do not fare
Forth to the West, where still thy voice calls us to hearken,
Up to the heights, and we shall meet thee there.

"Valiant for Truth has come!" thus all the trumpets sounded.
Valiant for Truth, who faltered not, nor fell;
Fearless he rode the trail, the last long trail unbounded,
Rode to the final goal where all is well."

The above poem was written by Mrs. Corinne Robinson, sister of the late Theodore Roosevelt, and it seems so fitting in describing the life of the Rev. Sewell Hepburn, who has just passed away, that the writer has copied it.

His funeral was held on last Sunday, and crowds came from north, east, south and west, to do him honor. As one stood outside the crowded church, and listened to the comforting words of the service, the thought come, what a wonderful thing, if some one would endow to his memory the church that he served so well, and worked so hard to surround with the historical wall. Here are the words of one who knew him well in Virginia.

"Here was a man superior to poverty, who used the talent which God gave him and feared nothing. Now that I can see Mr. Hepburn for what he really was, I must rate him as a "successful man"—one of the most successful men I ever knew who made his mark on the earth, and he never had any money. A man can do more with his life than he can with millions of money.

EDMOND FONTAINE

Well, Roosevelt has won and the "Demmies" are smiling. The weather was not in sympathy with the smiles, it seems, for a storm raged all night and morning.

The swells on the river were high and angry.

BOISTEROUS MORNING

My mood is the wind in the waving grass
My thoughts are the tossing trees;
And scudding the sky like the clouds go I.
A-sail on the air's high seas.

Oh, creation's stir is the spirit's spur,
And the storm-tossed heart makes shout,
When far and wide the Valykries ride,
And joins in the general rout.

STEPHEN B. STANTON

Many of the readers of the Sun's Cartoons are glad that Nebs won the victory without the help of bosses, and in spite, of Renrod's money.

In spite of rain and storm many parts of the town seem to be arrayed in gold, filling all the Atmosphere with a golden light. The Japanese tree in the yard of Mr. W. S. Carroll, and the one in the rectory yard nearby are especially beautiful. Never has the autumn foliage been more brillian than it has this year.

The storm and wind did not keep a goodly number from attending the celebration which was held on Wednesday evening at Emmanuel Church as a memorial, marking the 152nd anniversary of the convention which met in this Church in 1780, to change the name from the Church of England to that of the Protestant Episcopal Church. Everything English was abhorred at that time and the English rectors had been called home, therefore it was found wise to change the name.

And so the old ivy covered church has stood through stress and storm, these many years, seeing its members baptised married and then laid to rest for generation after generation. It is very fitting that the Emmanuel Men's Club have placed a tablet there to commenorate the event.

The results in Kent County compared favorably with the nation-wide vote last Tuesday in which Roosevelt and Garner Democrats, overwelmingly defeated Hoover and Curtis.

The resuits here showed a decided difference from the results of four years ago when the Democratic candidates Smith and Robinson were defeated in the county by 327 votes. The Democrats majority on Tuesday last was 1414 votes showing that 1741 Kent County voters cast their ballots against the man they voted for four years ago.

In the 1928 election Hoover won 441 electoral votes as compared to 85 for Smith.

Tydings and Goldsborough Win

Millard E. Tydings, Democratic candidate for re-election to the United States senate for a six year term and T. Alan Goldsborough, Democratic candidate for re-election to Congress, for a two year term received large magorities in Kent county. Senator Tydings, majority was 1277 and that of Mr. Goldsborough was 1524. In 1928 Mr. Goldsborough's majority was 896.

The total votes cast for president and vice-president was 4982. For Senator 4699 and for Congressman 4440.

In 1928 the total presidential vote was 5227. For Senator 4803 and for Congressman 4923.

Congressman David J. Lewis advocates the calling of an extra session by President Roosevelt to bring about relief from the Smoot-Hawley tariff monstrosity bill, and further states that he believes there is a good chance of securing the return of beer within the next year if the extra session is called.

CITES HIGH PRINCIPLES

L. Wethered Barroll, president of the Roosevelt-Garner Citizens' League, of Baltimore, said in an interview with a reporter of the Baltimore Evening Sun "the Democratic Presidential candidate made an appeal to what is finest in human nature— devotion to high principles, a denial that forces of special privilege ar the masters of America.

T. ALAN GOLDSBOROUGH

"No one since Woodrow Wilson has been able by the moral grandeur of his message to bring the nation to its feet shouting. In the dark days of 1917 the shout of a king was among them and humble folk arose clothed in a majesty matching that of the President. In these darker days, a greater leader stands forth and points to the peaks where dwell courage, faith and hope. The people have lifted up their eyes from despair and have believed his message."
