Attendance Race In October Goes To Janvier School

Worton Forces Leader For Honors

Galena Leads High Group

The race for attendance honors in Kent schools for October was between Janvier and Worton, with Hanesville and Skinner's Neck, tied and pushing the leaders.

Janvier, taught by Miss Frances G. Orr, had a 99.8 mark for the month, while Worton, taught by Miss Naomi R. Myers, had a mark of 97.4.

Hanesville, Mrs. Helen S. Sutton, teacher, and Skinner's Neck, Mrs. Lillian Orr Crouch, teacher, each had marks of 96.1. Skinner's Neck led last month with Janvier second.

Galena replaced Millington as the leader in the high school division by nosing out Chestertown for the highest average for the month. Galena's mark was 94.9 while Chestertown's was 94.7.

KENT BOYS 4-H CLUB NEWS

Kent 4-H Pig Club members who raised and exhibited pure bred pigs this year have had quite a number of injuiries from ot other counties for pigs for next spring delivery. Some of these pigs are of the best breeding in the United States and that is saying a lot. Kent is certainly ortunate in having such foundation stock in the county

Kent Boys Entertain

Members of Kent's poultry clubs entertained a number of 4-H club members, who made up the Poultry Judging Teams from the Western Shore, on Wednesday night of this week. The big State Poultry Judging Contest was held Thursday, November 17th at Centerville, beginnig at 9.30 a. m. It was necessary that the Western Shore Teams come over for the contest on Wednesday and the Eastern Shore boys entertained in their homes over Wednesday night. Winners of the contest were announced at a banquet dinner given the boys by the Business Men's Asociations of Centerville at noon on Thursday. The winning team will judge in the National 4-H Poultry Judging Contest in New York, November 26th.

TURKEY MARKET IMPROVING

While it is too early to say just what the turkey market will be at Thanksgiving, a definite upward swing is now in evidence. No one can say definitely how long it will last nor how far it will go. Western birds will be much less numerous than in former years, as growers in many cases refused offered prices. Blizzards and severe weather in the Northwest also delayed shipment when it was necessary to ship in order to reach the East in time for Thanksgiving. If cold weather comes and if demand is anywhere near normal, it is quite possible that there will be a shortage of good birds on Eastern Markets and therefore a scury to secure them at advanced prices. Some think it well to sell all birds that are ready at Thanksgiving, so as to get ahead of the delayed marketing in the West and especially in the Southwest.

County Agent Has Program For Horticultural Meeting

The list of reports on research, the addresses and the topics for discussion for the Peninsula Horticultural Society meeting to be held at Camden, Delaware, November 30th, Dec. 1 and 2 is in the hands of County Agent McVean. The program is most attractive. while the commercial exhibit and the fruit exhibit will be most instructive and worthwhile. Kent County fruit growers will want to avail themselves of this opportunity to attend this meeting, which will inform them of the latest development along horticultural lines. Now, it is more important than in normal times to be informed on all practical phases of horticultural work.

Maryland State Grange At Baltimore

The Baltimore County Pomona Grange is host to the 60th Annual Maryland State Grange meeting to be held at Baltimore on December 6, 7, 8, 1932. The printed program calls for a discussion of pertinent and timely topics. The tax committee will report its further findings in a three year study of the whole field of taxation on Tuesday afternoon. National Master L. J. Taber of Ohio speaks at the Grange Banquet.

Mrs. Maude M. Hudson, 606 Baltimore Ave., Towson, Md., is State Secretary and will handle all communication relative to the meeting and its activities. It is hoped a number of Kent Countians will attend. Your County Agent can supply information regarding the program.

HOW "UNKNOWN SOLDIER" ORIGINATED

By Rev. DAVID RAILTON, Son of Commissioner Railton, Who Opened Salvation Army Operations in the United States

I write to tell you how it came to pass that the body of a British warrior, unknown by name or rank, was brought from France to lie among the most illustrous of the land in Westminster Abbey.

The idea came to me—I know not how—in the early part of the year 1916. No man on this God's earth gave it to me. It came by inspiration.

I came from the "line" at dusk. We had just laid to rest the mortal remains of a comrade. I went to a billet in front of Erkingham ,near Armentieres. At the back of the billet was a small garden, and in the garden, only about six paces from the house, there was a grave. At the head of the grave there stood a rough cross of white wood. On the cross was written in deep black-penciled letters, "An Unknown British Soldier," and in brackets beneath, "Of the Black Watch." It was dusk, and ,no one was near except some officers in the billet, playing cards. I remember how still it was. Even the guns seemed to be resting.

How that grave caused me to think! I love every inch of Scotland. I had served in the earlier days as a private soldier in the ranks of a Scottish territorial battalion. But, who was he? From which of the lonely mystic glens of old Scotia did he come?

Was he a citizen of "Auld Reekie?" Was he one of the grand old "Contemptibles?" Was he just a laddie—newly joined—age 18, the only son of a shepherd from the far away Highlands? There was no answer to those questions, nor has there ever been.

Quietly and gradually there came out of the mist of thought this answer, clear and strong: "Let this body —this symbol of him— be carried reverently over the sea to his native land."

I waited till August, 1920. The rush and noise of "peace" quarrels seemed to be dying down. Was this a good time? My wife said, "Now or never!" So I wrote to Right Rev. Bishop Herbert Ryle, the dean of Westminster. I asked him if he would consider the possibility of burying in the Abbey the body of one of our unknown comrades.

Three days later the dean replied to my letter as follows: "I am perhaps not altogether in a position to give you a final decision on either of your two suggestions. The idea shall germinate."

August went by and September. No further news! The first and second weeks in October brought nothing. But on October 19, 1920, the dean wrote me the letter which I knew would find a grateful response in the hearts of most of the people of our land, and perhaps in time of other lands as well. I will quote the dean's letter in full:

"Dear Mr. Railton: The idea which you suggested to me in August I have kept steadily in view ever since. I have been occupied actively upon it for the last two or three weeks. It has necessitated communications with war office, prime minister, cabinet and Buckingham Palace. The announcement which the prime minister will or intends to make this afternoon will show how far the government is ready to co-operate.

"Once more I express my warm acknowledgment and thanks for your letter. Yours sincerely, Herbert E. Ryle, Bp."

It is, therefore, to this noble dean—since passed to his rest—that we owe the carrying out of the whole idea.

ORNAMENTAL HORTICULTURE

(BY W. R. BALLARD)

In the early period of American history most books published on the subject of horticulture were written in Europe. Then folowed an era of reprinting of such literature in America and eventually writers in this country began to write of their experiences in the new world, although these publications were largely dominated by European methods and ideas.

It has taken our horticultural writers a long time to throw off this domination and realize that our natural conditions and climate are so entirely different as to demand more adaptable methods. Since this realization has taken place there has been built up a compartively complete and dependable series of publications giving accurate and helpful information on all phases of ornamental gardening.

A number of excellent publications are now available on any of the following subjects: lily pools, rockeries, wild flower gardens, commercial floriculture, house plants, plant propagation, flower arrangement, and specific flowers such as the iris, peony and dahlia.

During the approaching winter why not include in your library of books to be read a number on ornamental horticulture? In addition to being intensely interesting, they will assist in gardening more successfully and efficiently. Any further information that may be desired can be obtained by writing the Extension service of the University of Maryland, College Park.

WOMEN'S FEDERATION CLUBS MEETS

The Eastern Shore District Federation of Women's Club held its twenty-second semi-annual meeting in the Methodist Episcopal Church at Ridgely on November 10th, with 300 women in attendance. The meeting was opened with singing led by Mrs. J. Kemp Stevens, District Chairman of Community Singing, and prayer by Rev. L. S. Matthews. Miss Beatrice Bower President of the Ridgely Community Club gave a cordial greeting to the visitors, to which Miss Florence Evelyn Monk, District President, responded.

Prominent speakers were Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, Chairman of Legislation of the Maryland Federation and Vice-chairman of Legislation of the General Federation, who urged the importance of an intelligent understanding of legislation; Mrs. Rudolph S. Allen, President of the Maryland Federation, who outlined the program of her administration, the keynote of which is "Build for Better Citizenship;" and Mrs. Calvin Gabriel, State Chairman of Citizenship, who have a forceful and informative talk on this subject. Mrs. Gabriel was introduced by Mrs. Alfonse Boley former District President.

Department Chairman who were present and made reports were: American Citizenship, Mrs. T. Alan Goldsborough, Denton, 'American Home, Mrs. Gardiner Spring, Jr., Salisbury; Education, Mrs. Harry T. Cottman, Hurlock; Fine Arts, Mrs. J. S. Taylor, Salisbury; Press and Publicity, Mrs. Frederick P. Roe, Greensboro; Legislation, Mrs. James B. Noble, Cambridge.

In the afternoon a lecture recital of Parsifal was given by Mrs. Paul Criblet, State Chairman of Fine Arts, after the meeting adjourned.
