TURKEYS

Considering present market conditions and future prospects our advice is to ship fancy young hen turkeys and fat medium weight young toms now rather than to glut the market just before Christmas.

NEW YORK CITY EATS TURKEY EVERY DAY.

Select and slaughter only turkeys in fat prime condition and make us a shipment every day in the week. This will help to prevent the market from being over-stocked at any one time, will give your turkeys not in prime condition a better chance to become prime, and will give you a steady income.

Write us for leaflet on how to select and kill prime turkeys, and for shipping tags, etc. We pay growers highest market price less expressage only, charging our commission to those to whom we sell where we think it rightly belongs as we buy turkeys from growers for them. No middlemen to pay between Meloney and retailers.

"BARTERING" BECOMES POPULAR

SHOWS WIDESPREAD INTEREST THROUGHOUT THE COUNRY

The following article is taken from a paper in Suffering, N. Y.:

SUFFERN, N. Y., Oct. 15.—Primitive bartering for merchandise and services was restored here today when a committee opened an exchange market. About 150 villagers displayed their commodities in the improvised market place and a clearing house for the exchange of employment and weighty merchandise which could not be transported to the place did a record business. There was lively trading throughout the day, but not a cent passed hands. Any one venturing to offer real money for goods would have been pronounced a heretic.

Ducks, geese, chickens, turkeys, crates of cranberries, barrels of apples, sacks of potatoes and heads of cabbages were offered or barter. One woman brought a goat she wanted to exchange for some building materials, preferably paint or shingles, and a former newspaper man, longing again for the din of the city room, brought a noiseless typewriter that he wanted to trade for as noisy a machine as he could find.

All sorts of fruit, vegetables, a set of office furniture and a trousseau were included in the articles offerd for exchange during the day. A few tons of coal and a load of sand were registered at the clearing desk for barter and one grocery man in Suffern wanted his house painted in exchange for a proportionate amount of foodstuffs to be taken from his store.

One artist traded a waterscape for four barrels of apples; another artist who makes glassware got a wide variety of vegetables from a neighboring farmer; a basket of caulflower went for a turkey and a duck was found to be worth a basket of potatoes.

Fifteen unmployed men went to the exchange and, registering arrangements made do work for the owners of various estates near Suffern in return for substantial quantities of food, fuel and shelter. Many well-to-do persons of the community, having nothing to exchange but wanting work done, went to the market with offers to buy so much food in return for so much work.

There was no hawking of wares at the barter. A person who had something to exchange would simply walk around looking at the other traders merchandise, decide what he wanted and begin to bargain. Each trade was a matter that involved only the two individuals concerned. There were no middlemen, no commissions, no wholesale and retail prices.

GOLDSBOROUGH RENEWS FIGHT FOR INFLATION

Washington, December 5 (A.P.).—Representative Thomas Alan Goldsborough, of Maryland, whose bill for inflation of currency passed the House last session, today said he would campaign vigorously for enactment of the measure during the short session which opened today.

"The bill is awaiting action by the Senate," he said, "and I believe sentiment for it has increased greatly during the past few months. There is no doubt there will be pressure from all parts of the country to have the Senate pass it."

The bill, as passed by the House, charges the Secretary of the Treasury, the Federal Reserve Board and Federal Reserve banks with the duty of restoring and maintaining the purchasing power of the dollar at the average computed by the Department of Labor for the years 1921 to 1929, inclusive.

This would be efected, under the terms of the bill, by the acceptance in the Treasury Department of outstanding governmental bonds in return for circulating notes. The Treasury would then continue to place these notes in circulation until prices reached the 1921-29 average.

Goldsborough said he considered the attitude of the coming administration "very sympathetic" to the measure.

Ritchie yesterday when a committee of the commissioners conferred with the chief executive. A similar conference recently was held with Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, the idea being to bring about cooperation between the counties and city as much as possible in the program of legislation to be submitted to the forthcoming session of the General Assembly.

The proposed legislation calls for diversion of a portion of the State gasoline tax receipts for use on road work in the counties; reduction of the school tax necessary to share in the State equalization fund; changing the general law to permit magistrates to try minor larceny cases, and credit fines collected from violations of the automobile laws, to the counties wherein they are imposed.
