THE TRANSCRIPT

Published Every Saturday Morning at Chestertown, Md.

IT IS VERY likely that in the near future the citizens of Chestertown will have an opportunity to express their opinion as to locating the new post office in the large public square. The sites offered for a post office in Chestertown do not meet the government requirements as to size and price and the public square location meets every specification. The Commissioners of Chestertown have the power, under the new charter, to sell the square property but will not do so without first getting the opinion of the citizens, either at a public meeting or in some other way. Advocates of the square location state that the town could sell the property for $15,000 and use part of that money for improving and beautifying the small square. That a brick building with limestone trimmings placed in the back center of the square with the surrounding ground in shrubbery, trees and grass would add to the appearance rather than destroy it. Opponents to the proposition state that any encroachment on the square would destroy a beauty spot and set a precident that would eventually destroy Chestertown's beautiful wide main street. The Town Council will take no action on the matter until it is brought before them, either by the government or a body of local citizens.
