DEAL AT HOME

The Transcript:

Awhile ago some one had a letter in your paper on the above subject of dealing at home. Saying in part, "Do Your Buying at home as the City Man does not pay taxes here." Now that was all right, only he did not include the real expense of the County cars. We save and economize on everything, even our food, until we have some money; then we give it to some one to send to Detroit, Michigan, for a car; then we must have gas and oil to run it, so we give a lot more of our money for some one to send to a half dozen cities for gas and oil. Detroit or no other city helps our city. When depression makes us hitch up a horse and drive where we want to go, we can use up a little of our 20c corn, free water and hay of our own raising. We will be more likely to stay home and look after our work a little more, thereby saving something. If we cannot get to some far off seaport on Sunday, we might go to church as we did 20 years ago, and then the money we did not use for gas and oil would likely be put in a dress or shoes or other clothing, or maybe, gladden somebody by paying a bill long due. After awhile factories would have to start manufacturing goods, to supply our merchants needs. That would put people to work. The money they got would go for more food and clothes, which would call for still more factories and truck farms.

Try it and see how quick things begin to move and pennies begin to loiter in the corners of our pocket books.

Many hundred years ago the Almighty decreed that "Wilful waste would surely bring woful want;" and "nations have been destroyed because they forgot God." Until we redeem ourselves from our reckless waste we are doomed to depression and want.
