HAPPENINGS ON THE SHORE

CECIL COUNTY

The ducking season for 1932-33 on the flats was the most unsuccessful season (with the exception of 1931) experienced for a great many years.

While the time for hunting wild fowl was extended thirty days over that of 1931 the duckers report small bags, due to numerous causes, but not because of the scarcity of ducks, as duckers and wardens report more wild fowl on the Susquehanna flats this year than have been seen in many years.

A large rock which had rolled down from a cliff derailed an engine and made wreckage of fourteen freight cars early Thursday, causing the destruction of 400 feet of track on the Pennsylvania Railroad two miles above Conowingo Dam.

At a hearing before Police Magistrate Manly Drennen, former commissioner David T. Reed of Rising Sun, was found not guilty on two charges brought by the Conversation department for the alleged shooting of wild bag limit of four geese. During the closed season the geese feed by the thousands in the fields on the estate near Bohemia river bridge, will prove a sight worth driving miles to see algeese near Carpenter's farm, in the second district.

Reed claimed that he did not shoot gun, that it was not loaded, but merely got down in the blind so that he would not scare the geese for the other gunners.

On the last day of the season for shooting wild fowl in Maryland, which was last Saturday, R. F. M. Carpenter, of Wilmington, on whose estate thousands of wild geese had been feeding during the season, invited any one who cared to try his hand at killing the wily birds to enjoy a day's sport.

Numerous sportsmen accepted the invitation and each returned with the most any hour in the day.

As many as 10,000 geese may be seen in the fields at one time. It is said that close to 1800 bushels of grain have been used to feed the geese during the season.

Probably the youngest highway robbers ever to have operated in Cecil county were apprehended last week when two girls, 13 and 16 years old are said to have admitted to taking a pocket book containing $77 from a lady who offered to give them a ride on their way to school.

WICOMICO COUNTY

Walter J. Powell, president of R. E. Powell & Co., Salisbury's largest department store, and founder of Walter J. Powell Corporation, whole-sales of dry goods, died from effects of carbon monoxide gas in his garage Thursday morning.

SOMERSET COUNTY

It became known this week that the President and Commissioners of Princess Anne were considering seriously having a bill introduced in the Maryland Legislature during the present session that would virtually insure the collection of all delinquent taxes.

WORCESTER COUNTY

Folowing the arrest of four negroes for law violations the remaining fifteen Negroes, all members of a colony who had gone there last summer for gathering crops of strawberries and potatoes, were ordered by the magistrate to leave Snow Hill for their homes in Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina.

Worcester County growers gathered at Pocomoke and Snow Hill last Thursday for the purpose of hearing early crop of potatoes. It was pointed out that indications point to approximately the same demand and acreage planted as last year. While some States have increased the acreage, others have reduced. The intended reduction in Maryland is seven percent.

TALBOT COUNTY

Work started this week on the new Dover bridge across the Choptank River. Considerable interest is being shown in the project as it is expected to bring money in that section and relieve unemployment.

TRAFFIC COPS FOR FISH

Tillamook, Ore.—Traffic cops for salmon on the Oregon Coast Highway is something new, but the Kilchis River overflowed the highway and salmon, running upstream to spawn, were so thick they were being slaughtered by motorists until guides were stationed to direct traffic.

At regular intervals, like any other traffic cops, the guides halted cars while the fish crossed the road—then held the fish back with nets while the cars proceeded.

STAR SKETCHES

Story of WILL ROGERS by Clara Bow

TO write of Will Rogers is like introducing one to his best friend, for Will Rogers is everbody's friend. He sits at every breakfast table. His homely humor is quoted in every home. Everyone knows that he is from Oklahoma, that he can twirl a rope with the best of them, that he was in vaudeville for years with the exception of a short time when he made some early movies.

That he is a great humorist, and has been a tremendous success. That he is a polo player of national prominence and has two sons, both of whom also are famous as poloists.

But there are a few things that we notice in the studios that are not always common knowledge outside. Will Rogers, although he chews gum constantly and buys it by the gross, never seems to have a piece handy but is always borrowing a stick from somebody. He swears he is not superstitious, but is regularly knocking on wood.

As a correspondent for close to 200 newspapers he has never missed a day or been late with a story, regardless of where he happened to be. His articles are frequently prepared in his automobile, and he carries a typewriter in his car at all times. His personal liking for flying and his articles on the subject have constituted one of the greatest boosts that aviation has received. Many of his articles have been written in the air. He has never played golf or tennis.

He dislikes the man who meets him and starts reminiscing. He cant conceal the fact if he doesn't like a person.

He shies from conversing on the subject of his early life as a cowboy. His early ambition was to grow up and be a man. Often wonders if he realized it. He reads the newspapers and current literature. When asked if he reads any fiction, Rogers replied: "Yes, the newspapers." Rogers enjoys the unique distinction of being the only actor who was ever allowed to fill in the amount of his own checks— Charles Dillingham always sending him his salary with the amount left blank to be filled in when depositing."

He is truly the spokesman of the people. He sits beside kings and presidents, and is welcomed in the homes of the rich and the world famous. But he is of the common people— he is their representative to the seats of mighty— their nominee to the hall of fame.
