GALENA HIGH SCHOOL

BY MILDRED COPPER

Work! Work! Work! Study periods are certainly few and far between.

After becoming acquainted with the tools (and teacher) the freshmen groups began mechanical drawing, electricity, and wood work. This certainly looks interesting to me, I think I should rather draw, make ash trays and candle holders as the boys are doing, than sew or cook.

I suspect Mr. Gillespie is going to have some new students if he continues to teach how to make such good looking projects.

In Home Economic some of the girls are making aprons, others are getting ready to cook. The juniors and seniors are making dresses, blouses and collars. Margaret Ellen Ford's collar is really artistic.

The chemistry class has just finished the chapter on no compounds; we found this to be a very interesting unit. We have started our literature and I like it much better than English composition and rhetoric.

If one has time it is fun to set and listen to the Latin class translate some of those wonderful old Roman legends, and even if one doesn't have time, one had to listen any way.

Many of the reports were disappointing this month, even though they shouldn't have been.

Personals. — Everybody knows where Anna Stradley is on Thursday evenings. She is listening to Cob Calloway's orchestra over the radio. Where were Bernice Horsey and Mildred Copper on Wednesday during lunch hour that thy couldn't hear the bell ring? ?

They pretend they would like to take manual training. Ask them to explain how the electric bell works.

BASKET BALL SUMMARY

WASHINGTON DEFEATS HOPKINS

Washington College basket ball team gave local fans an exhibition last Saturday night of what they can do for the first time in several weeks. Their exhibition was a reminder of the old flying pentagan with snappy passing and the ability to get the ball through the basket against very close guarding on the part of their opponents. Hopkins had a good team and the work of the Kelly brothers was outstanding.

Washington's team was strengthened by Huey who has been on the bench for the past two weeks with a bad ankle. Although Washington maintained a lead throughout the game the margin was small enough to keep the fans on edge. The score ended 23 to 18.

Washington's record to date follows:

—The Eastern Shore railroads paid the State $77,416.51 in taxes this year. The earnings of railroads were much less than they were last year.

The annual county-wide banquet of the Kent 4-H Boys and Girls will be held February 23rd, in the old armory.

—A second run theatre may be built in Salisbury. The cost of admission would be 5, 10 and 15c. It is not thought that this second run house would hurt the business of the regular theatres.

WATERMAN FORM ASSOCIATION

The watermen in the vicinity of Rock Hall have organized a Watermen's Protective Association whose efforts will be to look to legislation favorable to the interests of watermen. A resolution advocating the repeal of the law prohibiting the use of purse nets and the tax on gasoline used in work boats. The organization opposed the change in any of the other fish and oyster laws.

Similar organizations have been formed in other counties on the Shore and among the endeavors will be to establish a market for crab meat in the middle west. The associations have the cooperation, of the Conservation Commission in this endeavor and according to a statement made by Mr. Swepson Earl this week, crab meat is practically unknown west of Pittsburg, and with a little work this territory could relieve the already glutted Baltimore market which at the present time is driving the price down to practically cost. The price of water produces at the present time makes it impossible for watermen to make a living at the Eastern Markets are glutted, but an extension of this market to the middle west would greatly relieve this condition.

Another meeting of the Watermen's Protective Association will be held this evening, Saturday.

FURROWS

BY JOSIAH ALLEN WEATHERBY

Settin round the stove tother night down at Tom Barclay's store a lot of us fellers decided to hold one of these here tax payers' meetins. Of course, this one wuz sort of unofficial like. There weren't no office-holders there, nor politicians neither, so what we said wuzn't calculated to hurt nobody's feelins, and nobody got made or excited over somebody criticisin somebody or other.

Zeke lowed that he didn't see no need to git excited over this tax business fer if the county sold all the farms fer the taxes there wouldn't likely be no bidders and the county would have to take title to the land and we could jest keep on living there and let the county take rent fer taxes. We don't make nothin nohow and we wouldn't have to worry about the money to pay taxes. All we need to do, says he, is to plant enough stuff to raise what we eat and have a cow, a few chickens and some hogs, and we might git a few flour bags to wear fer clothes, and if there wuzn't nothin left fer taxes, then the officials could do the same as we wuz having to do. That would solve the whole difficulty.

Ezra said he wuz in favor of taxin the road hogs so much that the rest of us wouldn't have to pay much taxes. He said he would tax the road hogs accordin to their size, height, width, length, and weight, and then by the number of miles they run on the roads. Why, says he, out on the Philadelphia Road the other night I met a whole train of them fellers just like a railroad train, except every car had its own power, and they took mighty nigh all of the road fer about five miles, and it wuz about all a feller's life wuz worth to try to git a horse past all them bug-a-boos. Why, says he, I wuz off in the mud most of the time, and I don't know which wuz skeered wuss, me or the horse. Yes sir, road hogs ought to be taxed right up to the limit.

Hiram said he'd propose a moratorium on taxes if it wuzn't fer the danger of the office-holders and politicians bein forced into poverty like, and havin to live on short rations fer a spell. Jim lowed that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation might be prevailed on to make a loan to the office-holders so as to ease up their credit a little, in case we had a moratorium.

Jim proposed a tax on school busses, but when nobody seemed to agree with him he said he would propose taking the busses off and lettin the children walk. Walkin, he said, would be good exercise and would take up some of the time that is spent doin nothing but playin. And then, too, he said, we could go back to neighborhood schools and let the teacher board around in the neighborhood, like they used to do.

Jerry objected to this, fer that would break up our scheme of consolidation of schools. It's a good thing, says he, fer the children to go to school a long ways from home. It's like goin away to school without havin to go away.

Jed figgered a tax on fillin stations might help to relieve the situation cause they is too plentiful along the roads, and that would raise a lot of revenue fer the county, and maybe git attention forcused away from the delinquent farmers.

Then Rube spoke up and said he wuz goin to take a load of corn and other stuff into the court house and dump it right into the treasurer's office and tell him to take it or leave it, fer that's all he had to pay with. He said he might just as well let the treasurer have it on his hands as to leave it in the field to rot, and it ain't worth keepin in the bins.

And then I said, that about Governor Ritchie's sales tax? And Tom Barclay said he wouldn't have much tax to pay, fer he didn't sell much stuff any more, so a sales tax wouldn't hurt him.

About that time a customer come in and Tom sold him about two dollars' worth of goods. Of course, we had to stop talkin while Tom waited on the customer, cause it wuz a big event fer somebody to buy that much at one time from Tom's store. So when the customer left, we all looked at our watches and decided to adjourn till some other more convenient time. The tax question being unsettled, we all got up and went home.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES

(BY COUNTY AGENT McVEAN)

KENT HAS LITTLE HESSIAN FLY IN WHEAT

The U. S. Entomological Laboratory at Carlisle, Pa., made a survey of Hessian Fly infestation in Maryland. Five localities were sampled in Kent only one case of 6 per cent. infestation was found. The average was 1-2 per cent infectation compared with 14.3 per cent for the State so far tested. Practically none was found on the Eastern Shore.

Seed Corn Germination Tests

County Agent McVean announces that the Seed Laboratory is ready to make a survey of the germination quality of the corn to be used for seed in 1933. Any farmer who desires to know, in advance of planting, whether he may expect a full stand of corn is asked to send or bring a pint of the seed corn to the County Agent's office in the Court House.

The importance of seed of good germination quality is well recognized. Satisfactory yields rarely go with a spotty or uneven stand of corn. Every missing hill means reduced yield. To be sure of the quality of seed is one of the good practices which may be employed when every effort should be made to secure high yields, on reduced acreage, in order that the cost per bushel may be kept low.

Farm Accounts Books

Those of Kent's farmers who desire to keep farm accounts and to have help in analyzing the accounts at the end of the year may secure the books, free of cost, from the County Agent. A group of farmers kept these accounts during 1932. The Economist directing this work will be here soon to close up the books and to analyze. Keen analysis of your own experience with crops and animals can be most effective in teaching us. The analysis reveals which enterprizes are most effective, which are weakest; considers ways and means to correcting weaknesses; reveals "slackness" in methods that are otherwise overlooked. Any farmer with a record of receipts and expenditures for each farm enterprise may sit down with a trained economist and "measure up" his business along side the pattern made by hundreds of farmers with the same enterprize. Any farmer wanting an analysis of his farm business or wanting to keep form accounts should get in touch with the County Agent.

Apple And Peach Spraying Guide

Growers of apples and peaches will be working their orchards and preparing to spray. The County Agent has the Spray Calendar which gives detailed information on what to use and when to use sprays of various kinds. Those who have the one sent out last year do not need a new one. The information is free for those who need it and will use it.
