THE PRESENT CRISER

In order that this country might enjoy the freedom as is laid down in the Constitution of the United States we find, in reviewing history, that the outstanding men in the country during that period signed the Declaration of Independance and by so doing risked their lives and property that we today might live in peace and comfort. We now, as American citizens are faced with one of the greatest economic problems that has confronted this nation since those early days. Are we going to prove ourselves equal to the task of carrying on, or are we going to cower under the rather feeble efforts of certain socialistic organizations who are taking advantage of this present crisis to plant their seeds of discard. Our banking institutions are the back-bone of the nation, without them our present system of doing business is at a standstill. The question on every lip is, "what are we going to do about it," is best answered by "Do nothing, but lead as normal a life as possible and trust your State executives and your bankers whom you have trusted for many years to work out the problem to the best advantage of all." We are going to be inconvenienced, some of us seriously, until conditions get back to normal, but that normal condition, as far as the banking institutions are concerned, will be hastened in accordance with the willingness of thep ublic to cooperate.

"Character is What You Really Are. Reputation is What Other People Think You Are"

Character is the Most Important Thing to Acquire, and the One Thing That Each Person Must Get for Himself

You cannot get character any other way than by winning it. No substitute can procure for you the capital prize in the game of life. Your parents cannot give you character. It is every man for himself. Heredity is overvalued. One may inherit characteristics—but not character. Your conditions, your temperment, your family, your abilities, your weaknesses are the elements out of which you must form that supreme thing—character.

It is not things that matter; it is all in the way you look at things—your attitude of mind.
