SCHOOL DAYS — By DWIG

Brian to the Rescue

By ALICE DUANE

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

IT HAD been an unusually uneventful morning for Brian Kent, sitting at his perfectly appointed desk in one of his uncle's spacious offices.

Brian was getting into shape a report his uncle had asked him to have ready that afternoon.

Once or twice that morning he had been on the verge of interrupting this report business, finding an excuse to dictate a letter so that even for a short few minutes he could have had a reason to have his uncle's very charming young secretary sitting at the opposite side of his desk. But there was always a chance that his uncle might come in unexpectedly—and the report was urgent.

The steady dull drone of machinery was becoming almost unendurable—and then the low, throaty growl followed by the high deafening shriek of the fire alarm.

No special need for alarm, Brian quickly assured himself. After all, the factory people had probably been given specific instructions for orderly exit from the building in such an emergency.

The factory side of the building Brian knew was practically fire proof but this older section that housed the executive offices and the office staffs was of wooden construction. There was a sprinkler system and numerous fire exits, but even then things sometimes happen—

Brian quickly gathered up the papers strewn on his desk, crammed them into his coat pockets and dashed into the large bare room where the typists and stenographers had their desks. Most of the desks were already deserted. Girls were hurrying across the floor to an exit beyond. He called to some who lingered and told them to go without delay.

"Where is Miss Mason?" he called to one of them.

"She ran into the accounting department," the girl told him.

Brian muttered an oath to himself and dashed forward to the accounting department. Miss Mason was kneeling beside a small safe in one of the smaller offices.

In a fraction of a second he reached her, took the papers from her hands, threw them in the safe and without waiting to explain lifted her in his arms.

"What are you doing?" she asked, and then realizing that there was no alternative let her slender young body relax in his strong young arms.

"There is no terrible hurry," she told him, as he hurried down the hall. But Brian assured her that he was taking no chances. He would have carried her down the fire escape if she had not so seriously objected. Instead he went down the stairs ahead of her, turning back at every step to assure himself of her safe descent.

Alice Mason breathed a sigh of relief when she had reached the ground and realized that none of the girls had been looking on.

"They will all be over at the other side," she told Brian, who stood looking down at her in a friendly, possessive way.

"You had me worried for a minute," he said. "And don't you ever take time to put letters in the safe again."

"But that's orders from your uncle," Alice said. "There's always the chance that a letter might be valuable—so just as a matter of drill we always do it."

"Matter of drill!" Brian repeated blankly. "Always do it! What do you mean?"

"Just that every time we have a fire drill we are supposed to do precisely what we would if there was a real fire—"

Brian looked amazed and then laughed.

"The joke's on me," he told her. "But how did I know it was only a drill? No one told me."

"How did you happen to run across me?" Alice asked. "Weren't you going to leave the building?" She was trying not to laugh at him.

"I—I'd found you," he said. "You see that's the first thing I thought of when I heard that shrieking siren. I suppose I thought I was saving your life or something—anyway, I'm glad for your sake the other girls didn't see the rescue—" He looked a little crestfallen and foolish.

"I wouldn't have minded, if you hadn't," Alice told him. "I started to cry out at first, because I was so surprised. But—I didn't mind. I'd been hoping all morning you'd send for me to take some dictation—"

"And I'd been wishing I had a chance—"

A gong rang. Alice said it was the signal to return to the building. She wasn't laughing now. "I'm very grateful to you."

"Oh, pshaw," Brian told her, "I really made a mistake—and incidentally let you know, as you must know now, that I'm seriously interested."

"Couldn't we talk about that some other time?" Alice suggested. "That is—I've got to get back in line to go in with the other girls—" she was walking away from him now—"but I'm interested, too."

"Let's talk about it tonight at dinner," he called softly. "I'll call you in for dictation and we can make plans— So long, Alice—"

"So long, Brian. Thanks for the rescue. And next time there's to be a drill I'll let you know."

Thrill That Comes Once

"I painted something for last year's academy."

"Was it hung?"

"Yes, near the entrance where everybody could see it."

"Congratulations! What was it?"

"A board saying, 'Keep to the left.'"

YERBAVIDA
Brings Sound, Refreshing Sleep

Newly Discovered Tea Makes One Sleep "Like a Log" Without Drugs

Does tea or coffee keep you awake at night? Do you suffer from insomnia because of worry or nervousness? Drink a hot cup of Yerbavida before going to bed and you will sleep all night and wake up refreshed and full of pep and rarin' to go.

Mr. L. M. Moore, 109 N. Hope St., Los Angeles, writes: "Since 1918, when I had a terrible case of the "flu", I have ben troubled with insomnia—not able to sleep more than two or three hours at night—feeling tired all day. After drinking Yerbavida for three or four days, I could go to sleep and stay asleep until morning, I have gained weight and am feeling fine. I shall always drink this instead of tea and coffee."

Yerbavida is delicious and satisfying. Drink as much of it as you want, it can't hurt you. It is one of Nature's plants, and no drugs or ingredients of any kind have been added to it.

Yerbavida is inexpensive too. A large package, enough for 240 cups, can be obtained for only $1.00. If your local druggist cannot supply you, accept no substitute but send $1.00 direct to Yerbavida Sales Co., 612 South-West Bldg., Los Angeles, Calif., Or a 20 page book "The Story of Yerbavida" free on request.
