THE MIDSUMMER NIGHTS DREAM

The Midsummer Nights Dream played by the Shakespeare Club of Washington College, under the auspices of Dr. Gertrude Ingalls on Tuesday evening was a success in every way. A crowded house and an interested audiecne told more than words, how the play was appreciated. The many players acted their parts well showing they were carefully trained. Elizabethan staging and costuming carried the Spectators back to the 16 century and in every way the play deserves the highest praise.

DECLARE WAR ON CROWS

KILL THE CROW AND SAVE OUR BIRDS AND FOWL, ADVISES GAME WARDEN

Without a question of doubt, crows destroy more eggs of birds and fowl than any other agency and are especially destructive to our wildfowl supply. Maryland, being blessed with the great Chesapeake Bay and tributaries, furnishes more adequate breeding areas for black ducks and blue-winged teal (our native species) than any state along the Atlantic Coast. On the Blackwater Migratory Game Refuge located in the great black muskrat area of Dorchester County, Peter J. Van Huisen, U. S. Deputy Game Protector and Superintendent of the Refuge reports that in 1932, 33 per cent. of wild duck eggs of nests found on this area were destroyed by the Crow! In addition to being so detrimental to our wildfowl supply, the crow is also very destructive to not only ground-nesting birds but to tree-nesting birds as well thru the destruction of eggs. Therefore, if you want nature to increase, then get the Crow!

We advise the farmers who are annoyed with crows to take eggs, puncture a small hole in one end and insert strychnine, paste adhesive plaster over the hole and lay the eggs around where crows are using. Untold numbers can be killed in this manner.

NOW AND THEN

APPLE BLOSSOM TIME

BY ALICE MATHEWS

If one could only sing a rhyme
As fair and sweet as blossom time.
What loveliness we'd truly see
And life's great apple blossom tree
Would, by the petals that might fall,
Make all the earth a festival.

From old Virginia I've returned
Today, from its fair pageant treat:
And my whole heart has deeply yearned
To sing of beauty, one must meet
When old historic Winchester,
With Spring time petals is astir.

In Shenandoah's vale doth stay
Always full many a blossom-lay:
For he who on that path doth go
Will vision beauty's best-a-glow.
Then let's invoke a blessing too
That a great harvest men may view,
Who labor in such lovliness
A poet scarcely may express.

What a number of Queens we see in the papers now-a-days. Queens of May, Queen of the Apple Blossom Festivals, Queens in the various pageants to be held in June. Pretty faces smile at us as we open the Daily News, bright joyous faces, with high hopes of the future. May their lives be as bright as their faces are now.

A family had been prevailed upon to

A family ha dbeen prevailed upon to have their mattresses renovated. Among those to be repaired was Nora's the maid. But as it was taken off the bed, she called loudly, "Wait a Minute" and taking a pair of scissors ,she ripped the mattress and took out a great roll of bills. Her employers thought it so imprudent for her to keep her money thus, so they persuaded her to put it in the bank, the man of the house going with her and seeing it deposited. Two weeks later the bank failed. Her master and mistress were greatly disturbed. After talking together, they decided to pay her back by piece meal, as they, too, had lost. So they went to Nora and told her their plan. "Laws Honey! you needn't do that. I went to the bank next day and took it out," she said.

Everywhere now one hears the song of birds. The cat bird added his musical note this morning so the choir is very full.

FASHION NOTE

They called me from my sleepy bed,
A gardenful of birds;
I came and tried to answer them
With gray and silver words.

The earth was pearl and emerald,
The sky a moonstone bowl;
And winds of jade and jasper blew
Around my drowsy soul.

The sycamore in satin print
Was regal, oh, to see;
And stars of rose and ruby-red
Candled the maple tree.

Then down upon my window-pane
Fell a soft veil of April rain.

BEN BRIGHAM.

In listening to the play "Mid-Summers Night Dream" we were struck with the number of quotations which have become almost household words. "What fools these mortals be!" "The course of true love never did run smooth;" "The poets eye in frensy rolling;" and "give to airy nothing a habitation and a naue," are all so familiar to us all. Shakespeare has not written a more fantastic and amusing play than this.

Pyramus and Thisbe, with their assistants, certainly furnished abundance of comedy and the good acting of all, combined with the beautiful costumes, made it an occasion to be remembered.

GOV. RITCHIE SIGNS EUEL LEE DEATH WARRANT

Gov. Ritchie signed Euel Lee death warrant on Wednesday, May 11, naming Friday, June 2, 1933, as the date for his execution. In signing the warrant the Governor said:

"I am now informed," said the Governor, "that Bernard Ades, Lee's attorney, that the rules of the court permit him to apply to the Supreme Court for a writ of certiorari until the 25th of this month, and that he will apply for such a writ during that period.

"If Mr. Ades takes his full time, then this will leave a week for the Supreme Court to decide on the application for certiorari. If the writ is denied during that week, then June 2 will stand as the date of execution.

"If by June 2 the Supreme Court either has not decided the question or has granted the writ, than I will take whatever steps may be necessary to give Eul Lee full protection in every right he has under the law,"

Lee was convicted twice for the murder of Mr. Davis in the Circuit Court for Baltimore County at Towson and each time sentenced to be hanged. He was granted a new trial by the Court of Appeals after the first conviction on the grounds that Negroes had not been considered for service on the jury whcih heard the case.

Mr. Robertson, an Archaeologist of Baltimore, gave a most interesting lecture on Archeology last Thursday morning at William Smith Hall.

FRESH AIR COMMITTEE NAMED

COUNTRY VACATION FOR NEW YORK TENEMENT KIDS

A committee has been formed in Chestertown for this summers appeal on behalf of the children of the New York City tenements which pleads for two weeks free hospitality for boys and girls from five years of age up to sixteen, the host to specify age and sex of children desired.

Mrs. Nell Westcott is again acting as chairman with Mrs. Thomas Massey vice chairman, Committee members are: Mrs. Barber Bartley, Mrs. Jane Chaires; Mrs. W. O. Selby, Rock Hall; Miss Fanny Beckham, Mrs. John White, Fairlee; Miss Helen Schellinger, and Mrs. Owen S. Selby, Rock Hall.

Sponsored by the New York Herald Tribune the Fresh Air Fund last summer sent out 16619 boys and girls. Of this number 9633 were taken into private homes as guests and exceeded by 1800 the number sent out during the preceeding summer. This fine work was only made possible by the cooperation of the local committees and the response of the people to whom they made their appeal.

Maryland and Delaware made a generous response and quite a few of the youngsters who came in 1931 and 1932 are still with their hosts and dearly loved.

"THE FIGHTING PRESIDENT"

Bands playing—flags waving—millions of people swinging into a new parade of enthusiastic confidence. A nation finds itself today back of a man who is proving himself one of the greatest leaders our country has ever known. Franklin D. Roosevelt, at the height of a colorful career, the idol of a nation and the focus of the eyes of the whole world is this man of the minute whose commanding leadership, progressive spirit and fighting courage is leading a people out of depression and despair. What a story. What a drama. Never in the history of the motion picture was such an opportunity for a great film story telling in graphic and thrilling sequence the dramatic life of this man and his achievements.

This picture, "The Fighting President," a six-reel Universal special production that will sweep you off your feet with its thrills and power comes to the New Lyceum Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday, May 17 and 18. As a picture it is as big as a nation—moving as an army marching to war—as compelling as the Gettysburg address. It makes you want to get into step with the parade, to feel your muscles responding to the melody of stirring action, to salute the flag of your country with a new feeling and understanding. Roosevelt is today a magic word. Political lines have been broken to support a man who has proven himself bigger than political party and bigger than precedent.

Something more than a great story has been put into "The Fighting President." It seems as though the welled-up feelings of a nation have been caught and truly transferred to the screen as a great painter sometimes catches the "feel" of a scene so completely that those who see it are moved by a strange power that they cannot fathom or understand. That "feel" of returning confidence of a nation has been caught with such ingenious skill that you sense the sweep of power and have the sensation of being carried with it to some tremendously exquisite experience.

One hundred and twenty million people are waiting greedily for the fighting president's next forceful plan in the fight back to normal conditions. A hundred million people are hanging on his every word. All the theatergoers in the United States are politically, commercially and humanly interested in everything the President says and does—in anything that concerns him. That is why "The Fighting President" is so timely and so necessary a production. It will do its part in explaining the aims and unselfishness of the President's policies to the country for whose good they were initiated. Edwin C. Hill wrote the story which was prepared and supervised by Allyn Butterfield.

FIREMEN SAVE BARN

The Chestertown Volunteer Fire Company saved the outbuildings on the farm of John Wessel in Queen Anne's county from total destruction by fire on Thursday evening of this week. The fire which was discovered by neighbors had ,gained considerable headway when the firemen arrived, but due to the fact that the barn was empty which made easy access to the burning part, the fire was extinguished with water through the chemical line. The origin of the fire was unknown it, having started in the end of the barn nearest the house.
