THE ORGANIZATION OF the Kent Welfare Board has been completed with J .D. McVean as chairman. The present plans of this board are to help those in distress by assuring them sufficient food and clothing for bare existance. The help will be so small that it will not interfer with those employing help according to a statement by the chairman and every effort will be made to assist only deserving persons. The constructive cooperation of the pubilc will largely determine the success of the work of the committee.

THE BANK SITUATION in Chesterton continues to improve. Bank officials at both the Third National Bank and the Chestertown Bank of Maryland are working untireignly on plans that will bring about the opening for old deposit withdrawals within a comparatively short time. At the Third National Bank a plan has been worked out by Federal officials which has met the aproval of the bank officials and is now before the Federal Board for approval. This approval is expected within a few days after which banks officials will start working on the details of putting the plan into effect. At the Chestertown Bank of Maryland progressive plans are going forward which have had the support of those concerned Officials are pleased with the progress being made at both banks

The following editorial, which appeared in the current issue of the Commercial Fertilizer Trade Journal, carries with it a spirit of optimism that is so essential for the improvement of the present economic conditions:

OUR COURAGE IS INCREASING

Though the speed has been somewhat slackened the Roosevelt legislation continues to go through Congress.

Each new Presidential message, followed immdeiately by the introduction of bills designed to put the message into working form, adds courage to an already stimulated country.

America's abandonment of the gold standard was universally accepted as the first real step toward a direct restoration of commodity prices. This swift move on the part of the administration opens the way immediately for a more intelligent handling of international problems and a restoration of internatioal trade.

It takes no extreme optimist to foresee the good that will come from the President's conferences in Washington which are in progress at this writing. As a preliminary to the World Economic Conference, these man-to-man conversations in the White House, minus the traditional and burdensome red tape of a democracy's department of state, are capable of creating a new world understanding which within a few short months can completely change the economic situation.

There is no denying that this country is looking up. But none of us is foolish enough to think that our recovery will happen overnight.

The big thing, however, is that confidence is restored.

Before March 4 we had the attitude of a whipped people. We had fought, and we had lost, and with an almost oriental fatalism, we had abandoned ourselves to whatever might happen. In fact, each one of us had about limited our vocabulary to, "Good Lord, what next?"

Leadership during those dark days would have greatly helped the situation. But there was no leadership and soon the country yawned at the constant repetition of inane platitudes which failed repeatedly to bolster failing spirits.

The country cried for action. The response was closing banks, the crash of public utilities and investment houses.

These days, however, are past.

Commodity prices are rising and will continue to do so. The rotten banking system under which the people of this country have suffered is slowly being swept clean. The big stick is being held over the public utilities which for a quarter of a century have bled the country. Soon it will be impossible for the big boys in the financial world to shove off on an innocent and gullible public a ship load every month of perfectly worthless foreign bonds. Employment is being created and the people are laughing again.

We have every right to feel that the next four years will see a return of unprecedented prosperity to every nook and hamlet, every office, very factory, every home and every individual in this country.

STEAMER LOUISE SUNK

The old excursion steamer Louise that plied the Chesapeake out of Baltimore for more than forty-two years, once the pride of the Tolchester Steamboat Co., has had her career ended just as she was about to blossom forth as a $100,000 dining palace under the aegis of Promoter Humbert Fugazy, of New York.

The Louise, after snapping her mooring cables, sank in about thirty feet of water at Manhattan Beach, N. Y. Although her stern remained above water it was feared she would have to be abandoned. The vessel was sold by the Tolchester company in 1925 when she was replaced by the Express. She in turn was renamed the Express by her New York purchasers.

Dear Fred,

You told me that you were thinking of your family as your car skidded and turned over the other day.

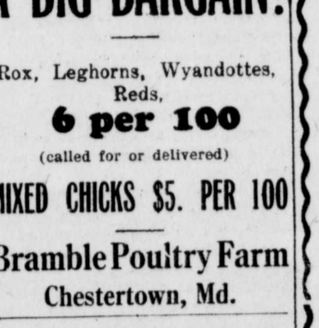

Have you thought how your family would have gotten along if you had not survived that accident?

I hope you have, and have arranged for such an emergency, but if you haven't, it would be a good idea to see Harper at Still Pond, the Massachusetts Mutual man.

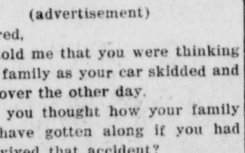

Faithfully,

Doc.

The Third National Bank

CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND

DURING the past two weeks National Bank Examiners completed a most thorough and searching examination of the Third National Bank.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors called by the examiners following their work, Mr. J. A. Amrhein, the Senior Examiner, stated to the Board that all accounts were found to be correct to the penny, and that there was no criticism directed toward the Officials and Directors in the management of the bank's affairs.

Mr. Amrhein stated that because of a large depreciation in the present value of the securities, and loans held by the bank, due to existing financial conditions, it would be necessary for the bank officials and the Treasury Department to devise a plan by which the liquidity of the bank's assets may be made such as would nable the institution to open for normal business. This plan is being worked out and will be given to the Stockholders and Depositors as soon as it is determined by the Treasury Department.

The Officials and Directors wish to express their appreciation of the very hearty cooperation of our patrons and friends in efforts now being put forth to bring about a speedy return to normal banking conditions.
