NOW AND THEN

OLD STOCK

Upon the house, a crooked sign
Succinctly said, For Sale or Rent;
The bugles on the trumpet-vine
Proclaimed their shocked astonishment,
While all the morning-glory eyes
Were closed against their hurt surprise.

The threshold which no alien feet
Had pressed, became a thoroughfare
For commoners from off the street,
Who came to pry around and stare
At gentlefolk, whose one regard
Seemed fear of trampling up the yard.

But in behind the shuttered pane,
Two old ones sat with folded hands
And lips compressed, not to complain
Although they lost their farms and lands
And all their slender livelihood.
They had each other—God was Good!

—ANON.

In these days when so many are still living in the homes where until recently they had every luxury, but now their means are gone, and their houses are for sale the above poem is appealing.

A little boy, when he heard that the banks were closed with all its attending inconveniences, said "Grandfather, I wish there was no money." When asked why he replied. "Well, if you have it and put it in banks they close, and if you have it in the house somebody breaks in and steals it. I think it is a lot of trouble, don't you?"

Graduation time is here and the graduates are busy with their many plans for Commencement. It is a Red Letter day in most of their lives, a day so full of promise for them of the future.

A bright eyed boy came along as a policeman was fuming over a stray cow and calf, grazing quietly on the roadside. "Can you tell me", said the irate policeman, "whose cow this is? "No" answered the boy, "but I can tell you whose calf it is." "Whose" the policeman asked. "Why it belongs to the cow," he replied as, whistling he went on his way.

Ministers can tell more jokes than most people. One was told the other day of a colored preacher who was sent to a new charge. His congregation gathered the next Sunday, eager to hear the new preacher. But his sermon was very short, and as the same thing happened again, and again, a committee waited on him to know the course. "It is my teeth" the minister explained. "I have none in my upper jaw." So the people collected the money and gave it to him for a set of teeth.

The next Sunday all was changed. He preached over an hour to a sleepy crowd of people. The following Sunday the sermon was longer still, and a committee waited on him again to ask him not to preach so long. Again he answered "It is my teeth." "But we gave you the money to buy a set," they replied. "Yes he said, but I ordered them from Sears and Roebuck and they sent me women's teeth.

Dr. A. S. Rosenbach, one of Dickens greatest admirers holds as his chief treasures autograph manuscripts of The "Pickwick Papers," and "Nicholas Nickleby." In writing of Edwin Drood, Roosevelt says that it is the greatest mystery story ever written, the solution was only in the tremendous brain of Dickens himself. The publishers were to give him $37,500 for this story. After his death many would have given more than that for the unfinished autograph copy but it rest in the South Kensington Museum in London and cannot be bought.

FRANKLIN A DAYLIGHT SAVER

To the Editor of The New York Times:

With reference to a dispatch from London in which credit for originating the idea of daylight saving is claimed for William Willett in 1907, permit me to say that the idea actually originated with Benjamin Franklin.

In 1780, in a letter written to the Journal de Paris, during his French mission, Benjamin Franklin pointed out that by using sunlight instead of candle light between March 20 and Sept. 20 the inhabitants of Paris could save 96,075,000 livres tournois annually, figured at the price of 30 sols (sous) the pound of wax and tallow. He also remarks, somewhat sarcastically, that, contrary to common knowledge, "the sun gives light as soon as he rises."

The whole letter is reprinted on pages 309-316 of Harper's Literary Museum of Early American Writing.

JOSEPH STEIN,
New York, April 23, 1933.

PREDICT 92 CT. TAXRATE

LOWEST RATE IN 29 YEARS LOOKED FOR

The tax-payers of Kent County will enjoy the lowest tax rate, for 1933 including County and State taxes, that has been levied for the past 30 years, the period for which the rate is available. The Kent County levy will be struck on Monday of next week but the indications at the time of going to press were that the county rate will be in the vicinity of 92 cents on the $100.00. The state tax rate for 1933 will be 22 cents making a probable total rate of $1.14.

The only rate within the past 30 years that nears the proposed rate was in 1913 when the County rate was 54 cents, although that year the State rate 31 cents making a total of $1.25. The County rate within that period of time has varied from 94c in 1913 to $2.51 in 1920. The State rate has varied from 16 cents in 1907, 1908, 1909, 1910 to 36 1-2 cents in 1918.

The low tax rate predicted for this year can be attributed to strict economy and cuts being made in all departments of County government by the Board of County Commissioners, the new road law adopted at the last session of the Legislature whereby the State Roads Commission took over the Kent County road burden and the cut in the required school levy. The Kent County Legislators at Annapolis cooperated with the State administration and the State Roads Commission to bring about the county road relief.

The Kent County tax rate for the past 29 years is as follows:

1904, $1.30; 1905, $1.15; 1906, $1.15; 1907, $1.12; 1908, $1.12; 1909, $1.25; 1910, $1.85; 1911, $1.22; 1912, $1.05; 1913, $ .94; 1914, $1.09; 1915, $1.11; 1916, $1.53; 1917, $1.44; 1918, $1.25; 1919, $1.32; 1920, $2.51; 1921, $1.48; 1922, $1.54; 1923, $1.48; 1924, $1.50; 1925, $1.47; 1926, $1.31; 1927, $1.60; 1928 $1.54; 1929, $1.99; 1930, $1.63; 1931, $1.67; 1932, $1.47

ARMY WORM ON RAMPAGE

CONTROL MEASURES RECOMMENDED BY COUNTY AGENT

OTHER AGRICULTURAL ITEMS OF INTEREST

The Army Worm is continuing to attack grass, grain and field crops in various parts of Kent. The most common method of combating the worm to prevent its migrating to another field or crop from the one it has damaged is the ditch or furrow wth post holes dug at intervals. This is quite an effective means of preventing invasion of crops. The ditch if it is cut under on the side toward the crop to be protected is more effective than a furrow with a straight side. If the furrow is deep, loose dirt in the bottom of the furrow retards progress. The post holes dug at a depth of a foot or more with straight or V shaped sides, trap very large numbers of the worms. In some places heavy posts or rail way ties are dragged up and down the furrow to mash the worms. But this is thought to be less effective than the V-shaped furrow supplemented by the post holes.

The poison bran bait is effective in killing off those worms which get beyond the protective ditch. No one method will get all the worms but the V-shaped ditch and post holes and the poison bait are a highly effective combination.

Parasites often attack the worms and prevent them from maturing to the butterfly or moth stage. But the worms do damage before the parasite can kill them.

It seems advisable to destroy by trap and by poison as many of the worms as possible; otherwise, unless parasites or other factors enter in, a large second or third generation of Army worms may attack in summer and early fall.

The poison bait recommended for cut worms and army worms is as follows:

20 lbs. wheat bran
1 lb. paris green.
2 quarts molasses.
3 lemons and
3 1-2 gallons of water.

Mix the bran and paris green thoroughly while dry. Stir the molasses and lemon juice into the water. Then the solution of water, molasses and lemon should be used to moisten the bran and paris green mixture, but do not make it too wet, just crumbly. This is enough for about three acres. Put some of the poison bait, about the size of a walnut, near each plant after planting. Cut worms will eat this in preference to cultivated plants.

The County Agent stands ready to advise all farmers regarding control measures, such as demonstrating mix-

"THE WORKING MAN"

If fate had intervened to interrupt the career of George Arliss as an actor, he could probably have made a name for himself in the business world.

There is no other kind of a role that Mr. Arliss enjoys playing more that he does that of the successful business man. He particularly likes to play the part of an American business man.

He had such a role in "The Millionaire." It is on record that he enjoyed making that picture as much or more than any that preceded it. He portrayed business genius in the role of "Alexander Hamilton," and he followed that recently with a part which made him one of the world's successful financiers in "A Successful Calamity."

He has another such role now, a role more than slightly reminiscent of the first American business man part in "The Millionaire," in his latest Warner Bros. picture, "The Working Man," which comes to the New Lyceum Theatre on Monday and Tuesday, June 12 and 13. It was obvious throughout the making of the picture that he was enjoying himself immensely.

"The Working Man," based on a story by Edgar Franklin and adapted by Charles Kenyon and Maude T. Howell, is a delightful comedy drama in which Mr. Arliss a wealthy business man, masquerades as a small town fisherman in order to prevent the ruin of the son and daughter of a woman he had once loved.
