TO RE-ENACT OYSTER WAR

SWEPSON EARL WRITES BOOK ON WAR IN CHESTER RIVER

Memories of the sensational Chester River Oyster War, which occupied front-page space in newspapers throughout America back in the year 1888 are to live again on the silver screen. For Conservation Commissioner Swepson Earle, who is recent years has contributed several attractive volumes to Maryland literature, is now completing a novel and scenario woven about this epochal event in tidewater history.

"Pungy Joe" is the tentative title of Commissioner Earle's newest literary and first scenario effort, and the name, it is understood, fits a very real character who played an important role in the stirring conflict between the Maryland Oyster Navy and members of the militant oystermen's fleet.

At that time it was illegal to dredge oysters in Chester River and as oysters were plentiful there, oystermen banded together to defy the law. Numerous battles resulted the most famous of which was fought off Hail Point, Kent County when a number of the dredgers were sunk. Captain E. W. Emory, of Chestertown, was an eye witness to this battle.

THIRD NATIONAL BANK RECEIVES PLAN

The Third National Bank received its plan of operation from the Comptroller of the currency in Washington on Satuday of last week and it is now in the hands of the Federal Reserve Bank, of Richmond for final approval, which is one of the routine details necessary for carrying out this plan. Following the approval by the Federal Reserve Bank the plan will be submitted to the stockholders and depositors for their approval and when these details are worked out the bank will operate on the provisions of the said plan.

While the details will not be made public until the final approval it includes the holding of a certain percentage of the deposits to take care of depreciated assets for which certificates will be issued. These certificates will be liquidated as these assets appreciate in value which they are doing daily due to the general trend upward.

Officials of the bank have been work ing continuously for the past three months to meet the requirements of the Comptroller of the currency, which included numerous trips to Washington and Richmond.

The present plan, when worked out, will meet the requirements of the recently enacted banking bill which in substance guarantees deposits.

COMMENCEMENT AT WASHINGTON COLLEGE

Commencement week seemed more important than usual this year, perhaps one reason that it was the last one that Dr. Paul E. Titsworth would be here, a man who has endeared himself to all, not only by his efforts for the College; but for his community service and his interest in all that pertains to the welfare of the neighborhood and his fellow men; perhaps too, it was the large graduating class 55 in all that brought so many here, and, also, to hear the interesting radio speaker, and newspaper man, Mr. David Lawrence of Washington. There is always something restful about the atmosphere of William Smith Hall the green wall and the color of the windows harmonize so well, while before the spectator, is the picture of William Smith with his keen intelligent eyes surrounded by the portraits of three eminent judges, and several of the President of the College.

It is pleasant to note how much interest the students take in their music and how well the orchestra plays the parts. There is something very impressive about the Academic Procession, the professors and teachers first, followed by the long line of graduates while the audience stands. Another portrait was presented to the college; that of the well beloved teacher, Dr. Micou, now emeritis. It was painted by Mrs. Gretchen Wood formerly of Chestertown. Mr. Lester Baldwin, in presenting it for the Alumni made a most happy speech of presentation.

Dr. David Lawrence's address was in no way disappointing to his listeners; full of facts and useful information. When the long rows of students went up to receive their sheepskins, ther were some who were Cum Laude, a few, "Magna Cum Laude and one, Calvin Linwood Brinsfield, valedictorian, Maxima Cum Laude.. Surely showing an example of mind over matter.

Everyone was glad that young Baker received the prize given by Von Prittwitz, in memory of Mr. Howard Fowler, for highest standing in German, it was a prize to be desired. All joined in heartily to the College song Old Washington and as the crowd despersed they all felt that the graduates "would bring her no shame, but be true to her name. To the fair name of Washington."

Honorary degrees conferred were:

Doctor of Divinity

Samuel Robert MacEwan, Easton, Md.

Doctor of Laws

Howard Atwood Kelly, Baltimore, Md.

William Henry Meese, Baltimore, Md.

Paul Emerson Titsworth, Chestertown, Md.

M. P. CONFERENCE AT DENTON

At the Methodist Protestant Conference which convened at Denton this week, Dr. Leonard B. Smith was re-elected president for his 5th year. Dr. E. A. Sexsmith, pastor of Christ M. P. Church, Chestertown, received a complimentary vote of 18 and is prominently mentioned as Dr. Smith's successor for next year.

The appointments will be read on Monday although it is understood that Rev. J. McLain Brown, of Kennedyville M. P. Church, will retire and probably be succeeded by Rev. Avery Donovan, a former pastor at St. James Church. It is also understood that Rev. J. W. Bexley, of Wesley Chapel, Rev. J. Lee Marker, of St. James and Dr. E. A. Sexsmith of the Christ church will return to their respective charges.

YEAR'S ACTIVITIES AT WASHINGTON COLLEGE

Annual Report Made by Dr. Paul E. Titsworth at Commencement June 12th

As usual, my report this year will be but a brief summary of some of the outstanding matters in the life of the College since our Sesqui-Centennial one year ago.

Finance

While the College still faces a small indebtedness on Reid Hall, it has been fortunate to pay off some of this obligation each year up to the present. It has been fortunate, too, in its budget. Washington expects to complete its sixth successive fiscal year August 31 next without a deficit in its running expenses. Beginning October 1 next, the annual State appropriation of $65,000 becomes $58,500, a reduction of ten percent. The net worth of the College is now $525,000.

Two Deaths

Two deaths in the official family during this past year have taken from us two men who can ill be spared, whose memory, however, enriches the College.

Dr. T. Howard Fowler, head of the Department of Modern Languages, died July 19 last, after an operation in a Baltimore hospital. He was a stimulating teacher, a loyal friend, and a wise counsellor of students, who enjoyed an unusual place in the affection of college men and women.

Judge Lewin W. Wickes, one of the most esteemed and beloved members of the Board of Visitors and Governors, died of a heart attack in his home in Chestertown April 8, 1933. For a number of years he served as chairman of the Board. He brought dignity, penetrating thoughtfulness, and fairness to bear on every subject he discussed in our Board meetings. He was devoted to the welfare of Washington College.

General Statement

The year has gone off well. It has seen increasing seriousness of purpose scholastically and morally. Faculty and students have, in general, cooperated well. It seems to me that we have had on the campus this year the finest group of students yet. And, after all, the type of student a college attracts goes a long way toward making any college what it is.

Washington enjoyed this year the largest registration, 297. Eighty per cent of this group was from Maryland and sixty-three per cent from the Eastern Shore. Eight states were represented in its student body.

The prospect for next year's enrollment seem bright, as many more inquiries about the College have been received this year than before. In normal times, there would undoubtedly be little difficulty in filling the ranks left vacant by the graduation of our splendid class of today of 56, and by the normal dropping out of students who for one reason or another do not return. As it is, we hardly dare forecast, although improving times makes us very hopeful.

The student campaign this summer is in the able charge of Professor Frank Goodwin, who has already practically covered the complete territory of the College once with good results.

This year, too, as president, I have spoken before more high schools than usual and on giving a larger number of high school commencement addresses. One outstanding occasion for me was the invitation to speak before the assembly of Baltimore City College. If alumni and friends connected with high schools or high school faculties will make it easy for the next president to speak before high school groups, they can make a substantial contribution to the success of our student campaign.

Two high points in college dramatics I want to mention—the presentation by the Shakespeare Players under the direction of Dr. Gertrude V. Ingalls, head of the Department of English, of Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream; and the giving by the Washington Players, under the direction of Professor John D. Makosky, of the Department of English, of the Second Mrs. Tanqueray by Pinero.

Washington College is doing increasingly more in music. This year has been a definite advance. The college orchstra, under Dr. Frederick G. Livingood, had of the Department of Education, has been a substantial college institution for some years. We are indebted to them for our music this morning. Mr. Raymond R. Moffett, instructor in choral music, has built up the men's and women's glee clubs and the college choir into capable musical organizations. A college campus is a dull place without good music. Washington is developing more and more of the right sort each year.

The Mid-year Convocation

During the present academic year Washington held its first mid-year convocation. Last February in connection with its annual Washington's Birthday assembly it put on this added feature. President Raymond Walters, of the University of Cincinnati, gave a stimulating address and received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. I hope this mid-year convocation idea may become a tradition at Washington and bring the College many noted men as speakers.

Alumni Acticities

The alumni extension achievement this year was the establishment of the Southern Delmarva Chapter of the

93 CENT TAX RATE

KENT HAS LOWEST TAX RATE IN 30 YEARS

The Commissioners of Kent County, at a special meeting on Monday of this week, struck the County tax rate for the coming year at 93 cents on the $100 which with the State tax rate of 22 cents makes a total rate of $1.17 on the $100.

The present county rate is the lowest that has been struck for the past thirty years and the only year in which the rate neared the present rate was in 1913 when it was 94c. That year, however, the State rate was 31c making a total rate of $1.24.

The outstanding item on the 1934 rate is $75,773.67 for schools which is 47 cents on the $100 as rqeuired by the State law. Last year and several years previous the State law required a levy of 67 cents on the $100 which last year amounted to $108,243.99. The new school law, passed at the last session of the Legislature effected a saving to the tax payers of Kent county of $32,570.32 which will be provided for by a cut in teacher's and official's salaries and additional funds from the State.

Another item that materially helped to lower the tax rate is the appropriation for roads. Probably for the first time in the history of Kent County, there has been no levy for maintenance of county dirt roads. In the past few years the State law required the levy of twenty cents of the tax rate for the maintenance of roads and bridges, this year, however, the Legislature passed a law whereby the State Roads Commission will take over the maintenance of the county road system for a period of at least two years.

Another important item in this year's levy is $48,440.13 for payment of certificates issued for last year. Of this amount $6,000 is for last year's election.

Other important items in the levy are $6,000 for hospitals, $2,000 for the Alms House, and $6,000 for payment of school bonds.

There were three items levied for this year which here-to-fore have not been levied for and have appeared on the certificate list are $2,000 for Cirpenses of the Court House and jail, $1,000 for supplies etc., for treasurer's office and $300 for audit expenses.

The total levy for 1933-1934 is $174,893.37.
