FURROWS

FURROWS

"It's a good thing fer a dawg to have a few fleas," says David Harum. "It kees him from forgittin he's a dawg." I reckon he's about right. And it's a good deal the same way with human affairs. It's a right good thing fer people to git a set back once in awhile to keep 'em from gittin to feel too proud. That's what has happned down at Washington. The President has been goin along pretty well and gittin most everything he wanted. Now he's got a set back, and I reckon it will keep him from gittin all set up over his success in handlin Congress. I ain't sayin that Mr. Roosevelt is the kind of man to git swelled up over sucess. In fact, I think he ain't. But any man in high position is liable to git puffed up over continued success, and so I say it may be a good thing fer Mr. Roosevelt to git a set back now and then.

I ain't sayin he's wrong in the matter of cuttin down the pay of veterans. I think he's right. And if Congress don't quit playin hide and seek politics with these veterans organizations, buyin votes with pensions, there is goin to be a lot of Congressmen retired to private life in a few years. The tax-payers of this country has suffered in silence fer a long time, and when they ask relief from the burden of carryin a standin army of seven to ten million soldiers on the pay roll of the Government, Congress had better try to give some relief.

There is too many people in this country that wants to git something fer nothin. And a lot of these fellers that claims to be veterans is drawing fifty dollars a month from the Government and also drawin help from the charity organizations. Them fellers is plenty able to work and if they wanted to they could git some sort of a job to pay fer enough to eat. But they don't like farm work. It don't pay enough money to buy bootleg licker with. They want free money from the Government.

A lot of these fellers of the American Legion and as long as that graft is allowed to go on the respectable part of the Legion will have to suffer the blame of advocatfon that sort of thing. Nobody want to do injustice to them that wuz disabled in the war, but them that took a little vacation with pay from the Government ain't got no call to be supported fer life at the expense of the tax-payers of the country.

I reckon the people better start sendin telegrams in to the Congressmen at Washington sayin as how it will be politically unhealthy fer them not to support the President now in this crisis. There ain't nothin more convincin to a Congressman than a lot of letters and telegrams from back home. That is more convincin than hours, days or weeks of oratory sounded from the mouths of Congressmen. So, folks, I reckon we might as well begin to write in about how things is likely to go at the next election.

Lem lowed the other day that he thought somebody ought to organize the "Veterans of Home Wars" to counterbalance the "Veterans of Foreign Wars." Zeke said he reckoned we ought to git on the Government pay roll as members of the Standin Army. Zack says if fightin entitles a man to pay he's got a lot of back pay comin to him because he's had many a battle, and most always come out among the defeated.

And this all brings me back to the original story about the fleas. I reckon it's a good thing fer people to have some misfortunes or set backs to keep 'em from gittin all puffed up with theirselves. A few fleas keeps a dawg from fergittin that he is a dawg.

YEAR'S ACTIVITIES AT WASHINGTON COLLECE

Alumni Association with a potential membership of more than 300. The first meeting of the Chapter was held in Salisbury last November under the presidency of Gilbert V. Byron, '23, of Lewes, Delaware. This Chapter, therefore, now enjoys membership in a sisterhood of six chapters in New England, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington.

During the year I have been working up a series of motion pictures depicting life on this campus which I have called "Around the Calender on Washington Campus." These have been shown before a number of alumni groups. These pictures have already demonstrated their value in the student campaign. In a few minutes' time they review for the alumnus the present activities of his Alma Mater, and for the high school student they bring an idea of the College which he could get in no other way except by residence here.

Reid Hall Library

There is a movement now a-foot, about which I hope you will all soon hear, namely that of collecting a library for Reid Hall. This idea, which originated with Dean Margaret G. Brewer, is being sponsored particularly by Dr. Mary C. Burchinal, of the Visitors and Governors. In the first instance it is an appeal to the alumnae of the College to its friends to contribute two dollars a piece the average cost of a book—to secure an appropriate collection of books that will add to the home atmosphere of Reid Hall and to the decided advantages of the young women who live there. We expect to indicate each donor's name on the book plate of the book he or she gives.

The New President

At the December meeting of the Board of Visitors and Governors, the present President of the College gave in his resignation to take effect June 30 next. On July 1 he goes to Alfred, New York, to become on August 1 the head of Alfred University, his Alma Mater.

Washington is fortunate in looking forward to the presidency of Dr. Gilbert Wilcox Meade, now Dean of Birmingham-Southern College, Birmingham, Alabama, who comes on the job July 1. He is a man of keen intelligence, broad human sympathies and ability in making contacts. A graduate of Allegheny College, Meadville, Pa., he did his graduate work at Columbia. His professional career includes teaching and administrative work North and South and in both school and college.

Gifts and Acknowledgments

Of the many generous gifts to the College ths year I can mention but two.

The first is that which Dr. T. Howard Fowler made in his will when he bequeathed Washington his valuable library of German and French books.

The second gift is that of $100 given by Friedrich Wilhelm von Prittwitz, former German Ambassador, our guest speaker of last year, who sent us his check last fall with the request that it be given in honor of Dr. Fowler to the student who achieved the best record for the year in German. The prize will be awarded presently to William Oliver Baker.

Particularly at this time, do I want to say "thank you," as always to Dean Jones for the conscientious performance of his duties; to Dean Brewer for her cooperation throughout the year; to the Business Manager, Mr. Johns, for his splendid work throughout the year; to the faculty for their loyalty and untiring efforts to advance the interests of the College; and to the two student councils who have done yeoman service in keeping things on an even keel this year; and ever and always to the Board of Visitors and Governors, that group of patient men, for whom I have growing esteem and appreciation.

Needs

I want to stress the two outstanding needs of Washington Collge. About one of them you have heard from me before—the men's dormitory. The other, just as great if Washington is to receive the wider recognition to which it is entitled, is a library. But since the present gymnasium would make an ideal library, what we really ned is a field house on the enlarged athltic field. Certainly, unless the College is soon to be strangled, it must have more buildings. I have faith that the next few years will bring them.

It is not inapproriate, I hope, in this my last commncement report, to thank all the friends of Washington College for the cordial interest, the encouragement, and the appreciation which thy have shown abundantly toward the present administration. After all, during the last ten years there have been laid bits of the foundation only, the real work of raising the fine superstructure possible at this institution has yet to be done. Washington has become now a national institution whose excellence or defects must be judged from a national not a local point of view. In selecting Dr. Gilbert W. Meade, of Birmingham, Alabama, the Visitors and Governors have recognized the now national character of this College. I bespeak for him that fine understanding and appreciation which you have so generously given me.
