CHURCH NOTES

Emmanuel P. E. Church

Rev. Charles L. Atwater, Rector.

Sunday, July 2, 8 a. m. Holy Communion; 10 a. m. Church School; 11 a. m. Holy Communion, with sermon by the Rector. There will be no Sunday evening services in Emmanuel Church until further natice. Also the Wednesday evening services will be discontinued until September.

The Rector takes this opportunity to request all members of Emmanuel Church to attend the Sunday evening Vesper services, under the auspices of the Methodist Protestant, Methodist Episcopal, and Protestant Episcopal Churches. The Chestertown Firemen's Band will give a Concert during the hour of service, which will be held every Sunday in July and August at 7 p. m. The service will consist simply of a Scripture reading, Prayer, hymns, and sermon by one of the local Ministers, or someone selected by them. The Rector of Emmanuel Church will be the preacher for this coming Sunday evening. These services are an experiment, and furnish a good opportunity for Christian Fellowship and cooperation. They will be continued if the people will attend them, and help demonstrate that in actual fundamentals the Churches are rather solidly agreed, differing only in minute particulars according to individual preference. We all have one Lord, one God, and follow the same Christ. Surely His Kingdom, His Righteousness, and man's allegience to Him, are of far more importance than any denominational complicency. In every community the Christian people should make some united effort to present the teaching, the principles, the life and words of Christ Himself to everyone who can be induced to pause and listen. This is something that the Ministers of Chestertown are trying to do, and they ask the assistance not only of their own congregations but of all the Christian people of the Community.

Shrewsbury Church, Kennedyville, Md.

The Wayside Poet

By J. Thomas Price

THE WAY I LONG TO GO

There is a path of peace and rest
For Pilgrims here below;
The Saviour's footprints mark the way,
That way I long to go,

It may not lead to wealth or fame,
Nor worldly pleasures bring;
But it will lead some day, into—
The City of the King.

The longing of my soul is not
For Kings of earth to meet;
But that I may when life is o'er,
Sit down at Jesus feet.

To see my Saviour face to face,
And like my Lord to be;
And learn His wisdom, love and grace,
Through all eternity.

NOTE:—Dr. Price, The Wayside Poet, speaks over Radio W.I.P., Philadelphia, Pa., every Wednesday at 10.30 A. M and over W.D.E.L., Wilmington, Del., 1.45 P. M., eastern standard time.

THE SQUADRON'S LOG

BY THE STOWAWAY

She may carry another yacht club flag, but "High Tide" is ours. She belongs to the Chester River.

Like a good shoreman she came back gloriously, winner of the 475 mile New London-Gibson Island sea race.

On Saturday, "High Tide" will have an opportunity to win again. This time she will try for the Bill Raskob Memorial Trophy in the Chester River Yacht Club Gold Cup Race.

The Squadron will stage a grand exodus from Chestertown for the event by land and by water.

More than thirty entries had reached Mr. Neal Truslow, chairman of the racing committee some days ago. He estimates that at least forty entries will be in the line-up ready for the starting gien.

All that is now needed is a good stiff breeze for the contenders, and a clear day for the spectators.

The Chesapeake rejoices in the return to popularity of sailing. True, all the larger sailing craft are equipped with auxillary engines, for safety and comfort, not for sport.

At one time the motor craze possessed these waters, and even some of the Chesapeake Canoes fell victims to a speedier age.

The first canoe to be so treated on the Chester River was "The Brothers."

Nearly twenty-five years ago, towed by a large sailing boat, a canoe old even then, left her native Virginia shore, and started on her journey to the Chester River under the guidance of Mr. P. A. M. Brooks.

To show that she was not a has-been, she defiantly cast off from the towboat, set her sails, and proceeded on her way unaided.

Lowering skies overtook her. Defiance was forgotten, and she scuttled to safety, and threw the tow-line again to the pilot boat.

Fiercer and fiercer grew the storm. Her crew deserted to the refuge of the larger boat. But one man stayed with her. Her seaworthiness engendered faith in him, and he helped her to weather the storm by keeping her bailed out.

Upon her arrival at Chestertown, the canoe was later turned over to the Collins brothers.

No, not Steve and Rich, remember this is a tale of long ago. There brothers were, Mr. William and Mr. Harrison Collins who babtised her the "Brothers."

Mr. Brooks took out her masts and her sailing gear and installed the Hubbard engine.

For eighteen years, "The Brothers" chugged up and down the Chester River under the power of that same 5 h. p. single cylinder engine, setting a new style in water sports.

Combustion engines were new and strange in those days, and no one really knew much about them. Web Hadaway's skill was not yet available and no gasoline tanks as yet dotted the shores of the Chester and its tributaries. One had to remember to take along plenty of gas, or else————.

Mr. P. M. Brooks was the Marine trouble shooter then. He loves to tell the joke on himself of how, when winter came, and the batteries were taken out of "The Brothers," he had to put the dry cells away all connected up because he did not know how to rig them up again. And no one in Chestertown was any wiser than he.

The little fellows, Steve and Rich, would howl with terror as "The Brothers" chugged with the dizzy speed of a 5 h. p. one-lunger straight for the public wharf. They would brace for a crash.

Miraculously "The Brothers" would stop just in time, and would glide gently on wind and tide alongside the wharf.

As Richard grew older, he learned the trick that headed off the crash. The old Hubbard engine was not equipped with a reverse mechanism.

For an engine to propel a boat forward was wonderful enough in those days. It did not need to go backward.

By shutting off the switch, and then throwing it on again quickly, the confusion on motions jirked "The Brothers" backward, and accomplished a reverse in fact.

As the years passed, "The Brothers" began to find herself out-distanced. One by one, other and speedier motor boats found their way to the Chester River. Other and newer engines were more willing to start, and the hard work of cranking the engine was no longer necessary.

"The Brothers" parted with the old Hubbard, and a new engine came to revivify her. But "The Brothers" seemed unable to longer try to do her best.

One spring, she was hauled ashore, and knocked down. Her hull parts lay tired, heavy and watersoaked.

Thus she died.

The new engine was taken away and installed in another hull. Her name too, was salvaged.

"The Brothers II," still going strong, is a proud member of the Squadron.

Gleaming white and gray, she speeds up and down the river, or floats lazily in her slip at the Chester River Yacht Club Basin waiting expectantly for a chance to go.
