THE SQUADRON'S LOG

BY THE STOWAWAY

Those who got up early enough Thursday morning, before the tide started down, saw the full effect of the storm at the Chester River Yacht and Country Club.

Shortly after 5 a. m., Squadronites began to gather where the pier ought to be, anxious for the safety of their boats and of the pier.

The Country Club lake had risen to the height of the fence along the roadway. Wednesday night, Captain Shrieber came out to inspect his newly reconditioned "Peggy" accompanied by Bill Collins. Two dories adrift and tangled together were rescued by wading into water along Quaker Neck road up to their armpits.

True sportsmen, they rowed out over the submerged dock, and made sure the boats were all fast. Then, rowing back to shore, they tied the dory to the Yacht Club sign and let it float.

They were back again early Thursday morning, afraid to look at boats, afraid the pier had given away.

Captain Scott Thompson was there ahead of them. He had spent the night on his boat.

By 6 a. m. the tops of the pilings began to show, and the dory tied to the Club sign was no longer afloat.

A large pile of timber, pilings from the old bridge that remained after building the Club Wharf, were washed up from the marsh and deposited along Quaker Neck Road and some of them were in the Yacht Club Lake.

Captain Thompson's Barnegat sneak box was washed out of the yacht basin up on the road where further progress as halted by its mast and rigging becoming entangled in the telephone lines.

Captain Hynson Rogers' Barnegat stopped at the pavilion.

The "Half Pint" broke a line Wednesday and rammed the "Swaraj." Mr. Philip Wilmer, President of the Club, making a tour of inspection accompanied by Web Hadaway late Wednesday afternoon succeeded in untangling the two boats before either suffered serious damage. The rigging on the "Half Pint" was torn and her sides will need some carpentry. The stays for the mast of the "Swaraj" jamming with the mast of the "Half Pint" were torn loose and the mast fell.

All of the boats in the basin show some damage, although none of the hulls were stove in.

Once more, the wharf at the Yacht Club has proved its worthiness and its value to the community. Some of its planking is gone, and it shows the effect of the severe beating of wind and wave.

The President of the University of Wisconsin said on the radio when speaking for the NRA the other day, that the civilized world as we know it as facing chaos, that the NRA is our only chance to prevent the return to the conditions of the pioneer.

Unless business can be revived within the next few weeks, the economic life of the United States will collapse.

A taste of that life might be like, was being experienced after the storm. When manufacturing ceases, when banking ceases, when employment ceases, and there is nothing more for any person than he or she can make within the family circle, we shall be back to pioneer days.

Suppose Chestertown was permanently without water because there was no more electricity? And when there are no more trains to move coal, and no more money to pay miners, there will be no more electricity.

Suppose there were no more electric lights in Chestertown. Oil or gasoline lamps would be useless, too, because no more oil or gasoline would be produced.

Without gas, cars could not run, and motors in boats would be useless.

Sailboats for a time could function, but what about the day when sails wear out?

Sailmakers would be busy trying to get something to eat, and since no more sailcloth or ropes are manufactured, there is no more work for sailmakers.

Maybe the sailmaker can get an old cow to kill for food. He will tan the hide as best he can to provide him and his family with foot covering, but the cow meat will spoil before he eats it all. Weather in Maryland hardly stays cold long enough to dry meat for future use.

There will be no way to get fresh or canned vegetables or flour. He might be able to shoot a few ducks, but before long, shells will be used up, and no more will be made.

But then, before spring the man who wants the sails will most likely be drying of scurvy from improper food, and the sailmaker will be dead of ptomaine posioning from eating spoiled meat. Sails will not be needed afterall.

Perhaps the safest thing to do is to take the one chance offered to save world civilization and the American Government and join the NRA. Work for the NRA with all your heart.

The Wayside Poet

By J. Thomas Price

A FAITHFUL FRIEND

What is the best thing earth can give.
As we go on our pilgrim way;
That makes worth-while the life I live,
And gives new courage day by day?
'Tis not the gold that glitters bright,
For that may vanish over night;
'Tis not the fame she oft does lend.
It is a faithful loving friend.

Great honor comes men rise to fame,
As we go on our pilgrim way;
The great of earth may speak our name,
But all of these will pass away;
The gift for which my heart doth yearn
For which, from other gifts would turn;
A shield and comfort to the end,
It is a faithful loving friend.

A strong defense is such a friend,
In hours of my greatest need,
Such strength and courage he doth lend,
That makes him such a friend indeed;
My faith in God and man makes strong,
And never leads me into wrong;
I'll thankful be till life shall end,
For such a faithful, loving, friend.
