THE SQUADR ON'S LOG

BY THE STOWAWAY

Six months ago we were all demanding action. Now we have it, lots of it. Even the elements got busy to help N R A and the farmer got it on the nose! Sure he did—we all are getting it on the nose.

This is what the storm did for NRA. It burst up some of the boats. Work is required to patch up the damage, and someone gets a job.

That goes for the Chester River Yacht and Country Club wharf, too. several men got jobs around there fixing up boats and wharf.

If you see anybody around the yacht basin, tramping over the marsh, throwing things around along the shore, don't be quick to run to NIRA with the tale that somebody is working too long. NIRA knows all about it. It is only Simon Westcott hunting for his rudder.

There has been no agreement of fair practices yet formulated for the industry of hunting rudders. Since Thursday this new industry has grown by leaps and bounds, in fact, in some sections a subsiduary industry has developed of hunting boats and rudders.

Every Squadronite will agree that a boat without a rudder is not much use. Everytime you hear of a lost rudder, just say to yourelf, "Aha! another job for somebody to make a new rudder.

Although farm labor does not come under the Re-employment campaign, the storm damage to corn has put a lot of men in the fields, and given work to many who wanted to work but could not get it.

Earnest, public spirited employers with odd jobs have called upon the Emergency Relief to supply labor. Labor prefers to live on the dole. A few weeks from now, so soon as the Blue Eagle flops it wings all over Kent Co., the National Recovery Administration of Kent County Division will tackle the unemployment problem.

Work will be found for all who are physically and mentally fit to work. Emergency Relief will shut up shop and go home.

Before it is too cold to enjoy a pleasant trip, Mrs. Thomas Massey, who is giving up her entire time to this work, will have a chance to gather her children together and chug merrily down the Chester River in "Sue Bert" and Kent County will be rid of the dole. But it all depends upon how soon Kent County Employers, and Kent County consumers, come under the badge of honor of the Blue Eagle.

We did a lot of yapping for a "President who would do something."

We have a President who is doing something. He has called our bluff, and it is up to each one to do what is requested, and to do it wholeheartedly. There is plenty of action for everybody.

The Wayside Poet

By J. Thomas Price

THAT AUTO

The Autos by the hundreds,
Go rolling pass my door,
They smoke and smell and honk and toot,
Till I am good and sore;
If I should ask these rolling gents
To do some honest toil.
They'd say, "Old man, excuse me, please,
I've other pots to boil."

A lot of jays who pass my door,
I quickly recognize,
But how they got the bones to pay,
To me's a great surprize;
I never saw them hard at work,
It is against their creed,
They're always bent on pleasure's ways,
No warnings do they heed.

Now, there goes Smith, who owes for bread,
And Jones, the butcher owes;
And Brown couldn't buy a thing on tick,
From here to Borneos;
Jim Johnson has a mortgage, on
His little house and lot,
And Joe McGraff has borrowed mon—
From every friend he's got.

And so these gents go rolling on,
And having lots of fun;
They'll never stop to count the cost,
While the old Bus will run;
And yet, no man can well afford,
His honest debts neglect,
And with his friends play fast and loose,
And lose his self-respect.

For as we live our lives below,
The thing that makes the man,
Is not the auto he may own,
Nor road that he can span;
But if he works at honest toil,
His life lived on the square,
His neighbors then will be his friends,
Because he played them fair.

WEDDING NOTES

BOND—MOORE

August lilies, gladiolus and ferns formed a backgraund for the wedding of Harriet Naudain, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Herbert Moore and John Leonard, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Bond, of Havre de Grace, which took place at one o'clock Wednesday afternoon in the Betterton Methodist Episcopal church. Rev. J. Thomas Price performed the ceremony in the presence of many friends and relatives. Mrs. James Brice played the wedding marches. The groom was attended by the best man, Mr. Frank Bond, his brother and the ushers were: Messrs. G. Herbert Moore, Jr., a brother of the bride, Joseph Glackin, Clarence Mason and William Duvall. The gorom, best man and ushers were attired alike in white flannels and blue coats. The brides maids—Miss Ann Bonwell, dressed in yellow mousseline de soie and carrying salmon gladiolus and Miss Bernice Wooters in green mousseline de soie, carrying pink gladiolus, preceeded the bride who entered with her father. Her gown was white organza and her lace and tull veil was caught with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of brides roses and lilies of the valley.

Following the ceremony the relatives and friends of the two families represented repaired to the home of the brides grandfather, Captain George W. Moore where a reception was held. Amid a shower of confetti and rice and the good wishes of their many friends Mr. and Mrs. Bond left by motor for a trip up north. Upon their return they will reside at Bel Air where Mr. Bond is a member of the high school faculty. Both Mr. and Mrs. Bond are graduates of the 1930 class of Washington College.

The Road To Better Health

PLANT POISONING

By DR. WILLIAM J. SCHOLES

There are four plants which exude a substance that is poisonous to man—Primrose, Ivy, Oak and Sumach.

The first is not usually recognized, passing off for acute eczema. The juices of the latter three are chemically alike, while that of Primrose is unlike any other.

Primrose Poisoning

This is more common than most people think. The dermatitis (inflammation of the skin) seen on the hands of milkers is probably often due to the poison of Primorse that has been deposited on the udders of the cows.

The hands and arms are usually affected. The parts that have been exposed to the poison itch and burn, are red and swollen, and sometimes covered with tiny blisters.

...Ivy, Oak and Sumach Poisoning...

The violent toxicity of these plants is shown by the fact that 1-65000 grain will produce irritation of the skin. Despite this some people seem proof against this poison, being able to handle poison ivy without any ill effect.

Treatment of Plant Poisoning

When one has been in contact with a poisonous plant he can prevent its effects by immediately scrubbing the parts with soap and water. If a certain part only—for example, the right hand—has been exposed, painting with tincture of iodine will often absort it.

One can also secure some degree of protection if, before going into a region where these plants abound, the skin is anointed with an oil.

Following exposure a full hot bath should be taken, and all clothing should be brushed and sunned before it is again worn.

If despite these precautions the typical dermatitis develops, a saturated solution of Epsom salts will prove the best application. It relieves the itching and burning, and limits the spread of the inflammatory reaction. When the inflammation has subsided the skin should be dusted with talcum or cornstarch powder.

Meals for the Household

FOR SEPTEMBER

BY BETTY WEBSTER

Labor Day as the last summer holiday is, for most of us, a gala occasion. It is seldom that the weather disappoints us at this time; so we can generally plan some sort of outdoor fun with impunity. Ordinary picnics may have begun to pall but a hike arranged with care will provide much amusement.

I think you will enjoy hearing about one that I attended. The hostess was original and her invitations printed crudely on pieces of brown wrapping paper asked us to come arrayed in sports clothes and wearing stout shoes. I am sure that everyone accepted and the guests assembled at the designated spot. There the fun began!

A hat containing slips of paper was passed to each one. Each paper contained directions how to reach a certain place. Those who drew similar ones grouped together and off we started. Along the roads had been placed amusing signs directing us to perform some task or other before we continued and to carry the placard with us to prove that we had followed orders.

Then the various parties arrived at the destination there was found a real tent, a blazing fire, and plenty of food. After a satisfying luncheon, a prize of a large, soft ball was presented to the group which had arrived first at the camp, and it was put to use immediately in an impromptu ball game.

At the end of the afternoon we sat around the fire and told stories and sang the while we toasted marshmallows. Finally, we were piled into a huge bus which the hostess provided and were driven back to our homes.

We are voted this a most successful party and are hoping as hard as we can that we will be invited to a similar affair this year.

DO YOU KNOW THAT:

1. A ham rubbed with peanut butter and covered with brown sugar before it is baked will have a delicious and decidedly individual flavor?

2. A strip of bacon placed on top of a meat loaf and cooked with it will keep the meat from becoming crusty and dry?

3. A soft chamois—(which has been washed to remove the oil)—wet thoroughly and squeezed as dry as possible is the best possible thing to use for polishing a piano.

RECIPES

French Dressing

3 tablespoonfuls of olive oil
1-2 tablespoonfuls of vinegar
1-4 teaspoonful of salt
1-8 teaspoonful of paprika.

Mix salt and paprika; add one tablespoonful of oil, and mix well; add one-half the vinegar, a little at a time. Blend, and add remainder of the oil and vinegar alternately.
