THE TRANSCRIPT

Entered at the Postoffice at Chestertown, Md., as Second Class Matter.

CITIZENS OF THE State of Maryland will decide next Tuesday whether this State will join the twenty-five other States which have already voted for the amendment to the Constitution of the United States which repeals the Eighteenth Amendment, or will be the first to vote favoring the retention of the present law. Those in favor of the retention of the present law are termed the drys and are composed of those who believe that the 18th amendment has benefited the temperance condition of the country and will continue to do so, and that that law can be enforced. To this group may also be added those who have benefitted by the present law either directly or indirectly. Those who favor the repeal of the present law are termed the wets and are composed of the legimitate liquor interests, those whose business interests, will be benefited by the return of liquor, those who want better and cheaper liquor for personal consumption and also those who favor temperance, but believe that the 18th amendment has not only failed in its purpose but has brought about a condition worse than that which existed before the law was passed. This last group will make the majority that will repeal the 18th amendment as the liquor interests and those who crave it will never hold the majority. True American citizens hesitate to think that any Federal law cannot be enforced but the fact remains that the 18th amendment, after being on the statue books for fourteen years, has never been enforced to the point where the illegitimate liquor interests were checked in their law defying business. The condition is general in all parts of the country and liquor can be secured by those who crave it and is served generally at social gatherings of men, women boys and girls. The violator of the 18th amendment is unscrupulous in selling his wares and his practices are encouraged by a large population who assist him in his ill gotten gains. Laws are made and enforced for the benefit of the law abiding citizens of a nation but when a large majority of these citizens encourage its violation and the remainder, for various personal reasons, do not assist in its enforcement then it is time to substitute something in its place. How the majority of the citizens of Kent County will vote on Tuesday is not known but which ever way the vote goes in the County, State or Nation the sale of liquor in this county is prohibited by the local option laws that will and should remain on the statute books for many years to come. It is our opinion that should the 18th amendment be repealed the enforcement of the Local Option Laws will have the backing of the law abiding citizens that the Eighteenth Amendment has never had, and that the sale of poisonous liquors will become a thing of the past. Our opinion is based on a thorough study of conditions as we have seen them, not only in Kent County but elsewhere. We have always upheld the cause of temperance and feel that the repeal of the 18th amendment will more directly bring about this ideal than the chaotic liquor conditions that now surround us. We admire the organized efforts of the dry forces in the county and realize that their work is conscientious and unselfish and an aim toward that which they think will better temperance conditions. What ever may be the result of wishes of the majority should have the support of the well thinking citizens as only the strict obedience of law can make a happy and contented people.

In looking over old files we find the following in the Transcript of October 1875:

ORIGEN OF THE ROOSTER IN POLITICS

The Cincinatti explains the origen of the Rooster in politics thus: "Indiana then had her state elections in August. The Editor of the Indianapolis Sentinel was J. W. Chapman. In those days locomotion was slow and it required days and even weeks to get the return from the back counties. It so happened that in some particular county in Indiana the Democrats made a gain over previous elections.

An enthusiastic Democrat wrote to a friend in Indianapolis the news and not knowing Mr. Chapman, the editor of The Sentinel personally, requested his friend to communicate the news to the Editor adding the words: "Tell him to crow." Chapman did "crow" in his paper and as the business of crowing is generally done by a rooster, he place a fine bird at the head of the column. It happened that the election proved to be a Whig, victory so the Whigs in derision said, "Tell Chapman to crow." So the rooster has been the emblem of victory ever since for there is not a braver and more gallant bird than the rooster. He is never conquered as long as he has life.
